Schmeling-Sharkey Leisure and Money Do Angels Fly on Sunday?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

NEW YORK, June 13—Today Messrs. Sharkey and Schmeling have something to think about. About 70,000 citizens paid $750,000 to see the fight. At least 40,000,000 Americans listened to the fight, blow by blow, on the radio.

Gentlemen of the gangster type from Chicago, gathered in by New York's police, were hurt when asked if they knew who killed the Tribune reporter. Certainly not: they came to see the fight, not to run from Chicago's shooting squads.

Mr. Sharkey took his part patriotically, and wishes you to know over his own signature that he was defending the honor of America "against a foreign invader." If the Kaiser, instead of Schmeling, had come he could not be more serious.

Mr. Sharkey, whose real name is Zurkas-kas, is a Lithuanian, first American born generation, which shows how quickly patriotism sprouts.

Professional gamblers bet two to one on him, which should have meant victory for him, and preservation for our national honor.

But it ended the other way, all too soon. Something went wrong—a foul, they call it—and now we can listen to experts and look for another match, maybe.

Mr. Nelson Rockefeller, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, writes on "The Use of Leisure," in the Dartmouth alumni magazine. The article is well written, serious.

In time the young man's problem will be "the use of money." His father and grandfather do not live extravagantly. They give away a great deal, but compound interest is more powerful than their giving. With any sort of management the third generation of Rockefellers should have at least five billions of dollars, a large sum to use satisfactorily.

The Prince of Wales flew from England to Le Touquet for a game of golf on Sunday, and churchmen at Cardiff wired him:

"Your Royal Highness should set a higher example to your future royal subjects by refraining from encouraging desecration of the Sabbath."

The Prince did not answer.

Perhaps he is asking the Archbishop of Canterbury whether the angels fly on Sunday or fold their wings on Saturday midnight, to keep them folded until Monday morning.

Certain springs were once known to be holy and gathered profitable crowds, because they yielded not a drop of water on the Sabbath. This has not happened lately, although it would still be easy to arrange a water supply that could be turned off.

A young American twin, Jenny of the Dolly sisters, sat up all night in a gambling house at Le Touquet, France, playing baccarat.

And as the sun rose she went to bed with 2,000,000 francs winnings, about $80,000. At least, she and the press agent say so.

As the young woman retired to her virgin slumber, the gambling house owners called her blessed.

For their 2,000,000 francs, if really won, they will get 500,000,000 francs worth of free advertising. Fools will crowd their tables and later Miss Dolly will return the $80,000 with interest.

Little, ones worry, and sell. Bigger ones, that have been turning out stocks, tens of millions of shares at a time, do not want any "violence," so they let the market slide down bill a little while, then steady it.

Thus, you may see a tender father, gently catch his little child, as it jumps from a height.

But, one of these days, the child may be seriously bumped.

Call money, used for stock speculating, cost only two and a half per cent today, and four or five hundred millions could not be lent. Sad for bankers, lately wallowing in 15 per cent call money.

Killings in New York were quite active today, with knives and pistols.

The killer, probably, was some youth in his teens, fortified with cocaine. Paid for the job, he did not know the name of the man he killed, perhaps Max May Fight Jack in Sept.

By JACK CONWAY.

Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling will clash in a return bout in September in either Chicago or New York, if William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden corporation, has his way.

The chances are the bout will go to Chicago, where it is certain to draw a million-dollar gate.

Gen. McClintock and Commissioner Gardner of the Illinois Boxing Commission today told Carey they would like to see the bout go to Chicago. The promoter will confer with Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, who has already agreed to the match.

Schmeling and Joe Jacobs, his manager, are also willing to go back with Sharkey.

The only possible hitch to the contest taking place in September is Arthur Busiow's contract with Schmeling which does not expire until Oct. 1. Neither Jacobs or Schmeling wish to have Busiow cutting in on the money.

FOUL CLOUDS MAX'S CLAIM TO CROWN

German Champ Says That He Hopes Dempsey Will Be His Foe in Title Bout

New York, June 13 (INS)—Max Schmeling will not defend his new title until next June, his manager, Joe Jacobs, declared in an interview today. He said he would be pleased if Schmeling's opponent would be Jack Dempsey.

The new champion, who was in a happy mood, said he "felt fine" and that he experienced no ill effects from the all-too foul blow dealt by Sharkey.

Max then said he would fight Sharkey, or anybody else, disarming no color line.

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, June 13 (AP)—The fistic world that had hoped to wake up today to celebrate the crowning of a new and undisputed world's heavyweight champion discovered instead that it had just another headache, hangover and controversy.

Max Schmeling won on a foul from Jack Sharkey within the last six seconds of the fourth round of what was to have been the decisive battle for the heavyweight title last night at the Yankee Stadium, but the result left the situation as chaotic as were the wild scenes accompanying the abrupt finish of the match.

Severely battered though he had been, the black-thatched 24-year-old German youth, who looks, bobs and weaves like the ons and only Jack Dempsey, emerged with whatever honors and title claims go with the victory. He may, for the time being, be put at the top of the heavyweight class, at least by his own countrymen and by the New York State Athletic Commission, which proclaimed its right beforehand to crown the winner as the new champion of the world and successor to Gene Tunney, who retired two years ag...

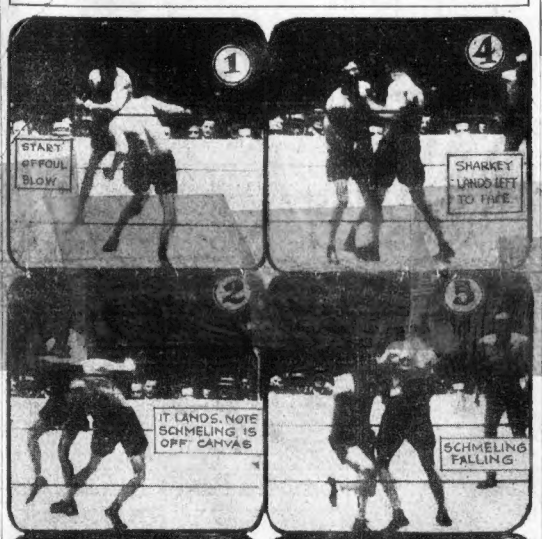
Motion Pictures Show Foul

Camera Reveals Complete Blow-by-Blow Story of the Sorry Ending of Championship Battle, an Ending That Deprived Jack Sharkey of Almost Certain Victory and a Fortune in Money.



THESE INTERNATIONAL Newsreel telephoto movie clips show the actual blow by which Jack Sharkey lost his claim to world's heavyweight championship, and by which Max Schmeling ascended to the pinnacle as the first foreign fighter to win the title. Reading from top to bottom in the first strip, Jack Sharkey is shown starting his powerful left, with Schmeling slightly up on his toes, having missed a hard swing to Jack's head. Jack's punch has landed in the second photo with Schmeling off the canvas. Sharkey's punch, a left-hand thrust to the midriff, is said by Gene Tunney to be a very dangerous blow for a fighter to use. Tunney believes that it is one of the most exacting of all punches, for unless the timing is perfect the result will be dangerous, just as happened last night at the Stadium. The third photo shows the Black Uhlan of the Rhine in pain, with Sharkey, who is hot on the trail of a K. O., readying his left for another swing. The fourth picture finds Max about to drop to the floor as Sharkey lands a powerful left to Max's face. The German's knees have sagged and he's halfway down in the fifth picture. The last shows Schmeling down, apparently suffering, and Sharkey about to walk to a neutral corner as Referee Crowley steps in. Crowley said he did not see the foul yet seems to be looking directly at the punch in the second photo.

PASSENGERS AIDED CREW FIGHTING FLAMES

Sergt. Kipp Testifies He Saw Lifeboat Partly Filled With Colored Sailors

Testimony that a Negro member of the Fairfax crew snatched from him life belts he was taking to women, was given at the inquiry today by Lieut. A. March, U. S. N. The lieutenant declared, however, that the others of the crew acted properly.

Members of the crew of the Fairfax were in a panic and others were hiding in a lifeboat, following the liner's fatal collision with the tanker Pinthis, it was charged today at the disaster inquiry in the Appraisers Stores.

Other outstanding points in the second day of the inquiry included:

1—Denial by Third Officer A. J. Powell that he had engaged in a fight with a marine.

2—Testimony that without aid of the passengers in fighting the fire following the collision, the Fairfax might have been lost.

3—Assertion that if the passengers and crew members who jumped overboard had remained on the liner their lives probably would have been saved.

5—Appearance of Supervising-General of Steamboat Inspectors Dickson N. Hoover of Washington and his taking charge of the inquiry.

6—Indication that the two chief targets of the inquiry board will prove to be the disputed speed of the Fairfax at the time of the crash and the disputed S O S distress call claimed to have been sent out.

Although he was unable to recount for his split upper lip, Third Mate A. J. Powell, of the Fairfax, denied that he had been in a fight at the height of the disaster.

OFFICIER POWELL DENIES HE WAS IN FIGHT WITH MARINE

with a United States Marine, who questioned the mate's authority.

Powell, who was in command of the only lifeboat lowered into the flame swept sea in a search for bodies of men, women and children of the Fairfax who had leaped overboard and the 19 men of the tanker, declared that several passengers attempted to get into the lifeboat but were ordered out.

A more elaborate story of this incident was told immediately afterward by Miss Nellie Todd, of 101 Woodlawn ave., Baltimore, pretty entertainer aboard the Fairfax. One man passenger ran to the lifeboat, she said, but Engineer William Owen drove him back, shouting the old unwritten law of the sea:

"Women and children first."

CRITICIZES CREW

The first witness today was Marine Sergt. Harry E. Kipp, who said he was a passenger on the Fairfax en route to Norfolk, Va.

He declared that some of the Fairfax crew did not act according to the traditions of the sea; that they abandoned fighting the fire and climbed into lifeboats where they remained, while passengers fought the flames.

Questioned by Capt. Lyons, Kipp related his version of the collision and what followed.

"I felt the jar of the collision and ran on deck, after I had dressed," he said. "Flames and smoke had cut off the exit on the hurricane deck and I went around the other side. Another marine sergeant and I went aft. There was no one about and we donned life belts. People began rushing to the stern.

"Some were burned and I saw some of the members of the crew and passengers jump overboard. We found a fire hose and started to play it on the flames. After about a half-hour a passenger relieved me and I went in the other side to get some fresh air.

"I saw a lifeboat practically filled with colored members of the crew. I walked around the ship and then saw nurses working hard on the injured passengers. The nurses were very efficient. No one could have done better.

"After the fire was out I saw uninjured passengers caring for the injured." The Gloucester came alongside about four hours later and took the passengers off."

Q—Did you see two lifeboats loaded with passengers? A—Yes, about an hour and a half after the collision.

Q—Did you see anyone trampled on or pushed by the crew? A—No.

Q—With your experience as a Marine what would you say the conduct of the crew was during this emergency? A—Some of them acted all right, but some did not act very well.

Sergt. Kipp was questioned by Capt. Stewart of the board.

Q—This boat filled with negroes —how many were there in it, do you think? A—There were eight or nine, about one-third of the capacity.

NO OFFICER IN BOAT

Q—Have you any idea of the capacity of this boat? A—About 35 I should say.

Q—Did you see any officer there? A—No.

Q—There could have been an officer there, couldn't there? A—Yes.

Q—Had the boat been swung out? A—Yes, and lowered to the main deck.

Q—Well now, it is possible that these men in the boat were members of the crew that should have handled it? A—It is possible, but I don't believe it.

Q—The people you saw jump over, was their clothing on fire? A—No.

Q—You think they were panic, stricken? A—Yes.

Q—If they hadn't jumped then they might have been saved? A—Well, they might have had a better chance.

Q—Did you have any quarrel with any officers or crew of the Fairfax? A—No.

Q—Well, with the exception of these eight or nine, all the other members of the crew did their best. A—Yes.

Q—It was a bad fire, wasn't it? A—Yes.

Q—And then, inasmuch as it was brought under control in 20 or 30 minutes, that would indicate that the crew had operated efficiently? (Kipp evaded this question, making no answer.)

Q—You have no criticism to make of the crew, have you? A—No, I haven't.

Q—(By Capt. Lyons)—How many men would it require to handle that size boat. A—Four or five could handle it easily.

Q—If you had been in charge, do you think you could have put the fire out much quicker? A—That would depend on how well drilled the crew was.

But this fire could not have been put out so quickly if the passengers had not rendered a great deal of assistance. It was the help of the passengers that probably saved the boat.

Q—There are 23 fire plugs aboard the Fairfax, there are 30 men in the crew. Couldn't they have taken care of the fire? A—No, not and take care of the lifeboats and passengers, too.

QUIZZED BY HOOVER

Supervisor-General Hoover then questioned the witness. He quickly went over testimony offered by Kipp while under questioning of Captain Lyons and Stewart.

Hoover asked: Did you see any members of the crew attempting to fight passengers with axes and clubs while seated in this lifeboat. A—No.

Q—Did you see any altercation between officers of the ship and a member of the United States Marine Corps? A.—No.

Q—Did you see any members of the crew fighting the fire. A—Yes.

Q—Did you see any not assisting in fighting this fire? A—Very few of the crew were assisting that I could see.

Q—You said the negroes were dangerous; that might have been due to panic?. A—Yes.

POWELL ON STAND

A. J. Powell, third officer of the Fairfax was then recalled to the stand and reminded by Capt. Stewart that he was still under oath. He was then questioned by Capt. Hoover.

Q—Did you have any altercation with any of the passengers, U. S. Marines or U. S. Navy men? A.—No.

Q—Did anyone strike you? A—No.

Q—Did you receive any injury? A—No. I got a small cut on the lip, but I do not know how it happened.

Q—You heard the testimony about the lowering of the boat? Did you give that order? A—Yes, I ordered No. 3 lowered.

Q—Did you see eight or nine negroes in it? A.—I never saw them.

He further testified that he saw several passengers get in the boat, but could not recall how many. He said there were only two or three of the crew there and they might have got into the boat.

Q—Did anybody strike you and tell you that it was wrong for the members of the crew to be in that life boat? A.—Emphatically no.

Q—Did you see the statements in the newspapers to the effect that you had an altercation with a mulatto? A.—Sir, and it is corrected in this morning's paper too.

HOSTESS CALLED

Miss Nellie Todd of Baltimore, hostess on the Fairfax, then was called and testified that it was her duty to entertain the passengers. She testified she was in the music room playing the piano when the crash occured.

She went into the social hall, she testified, and saw about 10 men and women, some with life preservers on, others trying to get them on. She also described how she helped some of the women don the preservers.

Q—(By Capt. Lyons) Is it your duty to put on life preservers? A—As a member of the crew I felt that it was my duty to do so.

Q—Did you see any women trampled on or walked over? —did not.

Q—In the dining saloon aft, did you see any of the passengers assisting the crew? A—I cannot say.

Q—Did you see the crew attempting to extinguish the fire? —Yes, they were trying to do that while others were trying to rescue passengers. I saw a Negro waiter, Mr. Gregory, break open stateroom windows to get the passengers out.

She further declared that the crew was very calm and did all possible to aid the injured and the passengers.

Miss Dorothy Mannix of Waltham, registered nurse on the Fairfax, testified to the treatment given the burned passengers. She said there was no evidence of panic during the fire and that the crew was faultless in giving every assistance to the passengers.

"I came from my room just before the crash," she said. "An officer took me by the arm and said, 'We are going to have a collision.' I looked forward and saw another vessel within a few feet of the starboard bow. I had just stepped back into my room when the crash came.

"For a moment I did not know what to do. Then I pulled myself together and started down the deck. Members of the crew were smashing windows of staterooms and bringing out life preservers. These rooms were unoccupied. Women ran up to me and grabbed me by the arms and shouted, 'Are we going to die?'

FIRE HEMS THEM

"The flames swept along the deck and a little group of women huddled about me in a sort of cubbyhole. I told them that we would be all right, that we had a fire before and came through it all right.

"I couldn't move out of the cubbyhole. Burning wood was falling about us. Women and some men kept saying, 'Jesus, Jesus.' I saw one woman kneeling on deck with her hands folded in prayer.

"I think most of these passengers later jumped overboard. An officer came by and I took the ship hostess by the hand and told the other women to follow us. We went to No. 2 lifeboat but it was completely ruined by fire.

"A marine or a sailor tried to help us by pushing us into another lifeboat, but one of the officers came by and said it wasn't necessary. I saw only one of the crew in No. 5 boat and his arms were badly burned.

"I went about assisting passengers, trying to make them comfortable. I gave morphia to Mrs. Dearborn and to Mrs. Berkowitz. They afterwards died."

Q.—Do you think any of the injured passengers could have been saved if they had been moved from the Fairfax an hour or two earlier?

A.—No, everything that could be done in a hospital was done. We had complete equipment of drugs and other remedies.

Q.—Was there any panic among the passengers of crew?

A.—No, I didn't even hear an outcry.

The next witness, Miss Jane Stone of Washington, housekeeper of the Fairfax, said she observed members of the crew and waiters passing life-belts to passengers and aiding them in putting them on. She said she found Mrs. Berkowitz and her child on deck and strapped on a lifebelt about Mrs. Berkowitz.

AIDED BURNED WOMAN

"I had difficulty in putting the lifebelt on Mrs. Berkowitz. She insisted on holding her child. I asked her to give me the baby so I could strap on a lifebelt on the child, but she refused. She said, 'I want to hold my baby.' After a while I succeeded in getting the belt on while the mother held the child close to her breast.

"Then she asked me to take the baby to her. I got a bed sheet and wrapped it about them. I could not make it secure, but I did it to satisfy Mrs. Berkowitz.

"In the meantime a man kept running over to us, telling us we must get in the lifeboat. I refused several times and stood by Mrs. Berkowitz. Finally the man dragged me into a boat. I stayed in there 10 minutes and then saw that the danger had passed."

Miss Stone said there was no foundation to the stories of passengers relative to neglect and inefficiency on the part of the crew.

RESCUED WOMAN

The next witness was W. M. Smith, chief steward of the Fairfax. He testified he ran down the deck, opening doors and instructing occupants of staterooms to follow. He said he heard a woman screaming in one of the staterooms, the door of which was open. She was badly burned, he said, and was trying to crawl out.

"I reached in and grabbed her. I succeeded in holding her out part way when smoke and flame burst from the inside of the room. I was driven back. I left her there, but returned within a minute with a member of the crew and we pulled her out."

"I went to the captain and asked him if he had any instructions. He said, 'Take care of the injured.' I showed Miss Dayton, a trained nurse, to the medicine cabinet in my office and told her that they had access to anything in the medical line there."

Q. (by Capt. Lyons)—In your opinion, was there anything more that could be done for the injured than the crew and the nurses did? A.—There was not another thing in the world that could have been done for them.

LAST BOAT DRILL

Q.—When was the last boat drill held?

A.—At 8 a. m. Tuesday.

Q.—How do you account for so many people being burned?

A.—Those were the people in the rooms on the port side, the same as the woman who was burned.

Q.—Did you see any women trampled on?

11 LEAP TO DEATH

A.—Thirty-five.

Q.—How many of the crew in the boat?

A.—Twelve jumped over the side, One was rescued. I lost 11 men.

Q.—How do your account for 11 of them jumping overboard? A—Through fright only.

Q.—Do you think that if they had not been frightened there wouldn't have been any lose of life?

A—I don't think so and if somebody hadn't started jumping, my men wouldn't have done so. If they had stayed on the boat here would not have been so many lost.

DIDN'T SEE MARINES

Q.—Couldn't you calm your men? A.—There was no way for me to calm them. I made an attempt to do so. I tried to stop them from jumping overboard. I got the coat of one but I didn't get my man. He jumped out of his coat.

Q. (By Supervisor-General Hoover)—Did you see the Marines doing anything to aid the crew? A—I did not see them assisting in any way except perhaps to console the passengers.

Q—Did you see any of them fighting the fire? A—I saw no one fighting the fire except the boat crew.

"I ran on deck from the dining room after the impact and went aft. Smoke and sheets of flame followed. As I passed the stairway six colored waiters ran out. The flames were all around us and I took shelter at the corner of the deckhouse. I went over to the starboard side of the boat deck and saw the steward assisting a burned woman, who held a baby in her arms.

"She stepped into a stateroom. She was crying hysterically. I looked under the bed in the stateroom to get a lifebelt for her and found they were gone. I went out and broke in the windows of another room and secured a lifebelt for her.

"Later I passed out lifebelts to other passengers. There were cries of 'Get on deck.' I ran up to boat No. 7 and found that Third Officer Powell was trying to lower it. There were five passengers in the boat. Powell had hold of one rope at the bow end. The head lifter and myself got on the stern end and tried to free the boat from the chucks on deck. I guess we were not strong enough.

MARINE CUT ROPE

"Then a U. S. marine came along and picked up an axe, which was lying by the dance hall. He cut the fall rope at a point between Powell's hands and the roll bar. The boat was put out of commission when five passengers had been lowered. Capt. Brooks came along then and ordered me to get some boys.

"I did so, and placed it on parts of the dance hall that were burning."

Q.—Are you sure it was not a member of the crew that cut the rope? A.—Positively not.

Q.—Couldn't you stop the marine from cutting it? A.—No. It was done too quickly.

Q.—When the waiters came running out of the "gloryhole" did they appear frightened? A.—Well, they hollered a lot. I suppose the fire frightened them.

Q.—Did you see any interference with passengers by the crew? A.—No.

Under further questioning by Supervisor Hoover, Foggs reiterated his assertion that a Marine cut the rope, saying: "It was done quicker than you could snap your finger." Fogg snapped his fingers as he made this answer.

He insisted he saw three or four members of the crew and one officer handling a hose line and praised the conduct of the negroes, saying, "they carried on in a manner extraordinary under the conditions."

The next witness was Lieut. J. A. Marsh, U. S. N., who said:

"I was in my stateroom on the upper deck aft on the port side. I felt the ship hit. It was not much of an impact. I got up, walked out to the rail. It probably took 20 or 30 seconds, because I put my coat on. I looked over the side. About this time I heard a sort of mumbled explosion. I saw a great deal of flame in the water and it seemed to be creeping up our hull.

MISS NELLIE TODD MISS DOROTHY MANNIX

NO PANIC AMONG the crew of the Fairfax was observed by Miss Nellie Todd, the ship hostess, or by Miss Dorothy Mannix, the ship nurse, according to their testimony at the investigation of their ship's collision with the oil tanker Pinthis. (Staff photo.)

"I rushed back to my stateroom, told my wife to get up, then went on deck for a second look. As I got to the rail there was flame and smoke, burning embers and sparks, enveloping the aft end on the port side.

"I yelled to my wife. She couldn't see me. I walked about for about five feet and we found each other. My wife was badly burned. I took her back to the stateroom.

"Then I took her astern on the starboard side. I then went to the social hall and got four life jackets. I gave one to her, a negro grabbed the other three. I believe he gave them to other passengers, but I do not know.

MARINES HELPING

"I went on deck and asked the officers if he was going to get the boats. He said he couldn't get them. There were bluejackets and Marines helping to get the people quieted. I took my wife and another woman, who was burned to a state room. I saw the chief steward and I asked him where I could get something for my wife, for her burns.

"He told me to bring her and the other woman who was burned to the lifeboats and they would be given medical attention in the boats.

"I got my wife and the other woman to the lifeboats. The passengers were in them about 10 minutes and were then taken off, the fire bing under control.

"I, with the help of other passengers, helped put out one fire by taking hold of a hose line. The steward came along later and put salve on the burns of my wife and the other woman.

"I am certain that most of the people in the lifeboats were women-I don't recall when the Gloucester arrived. I think it was about midnight. It seemed to have a hard time getting alongside, but when she did we were transferred and came up to Boston in about a half hour."

TANKER OWNER ASKS $350,000

New York, June 13 (AP)—Suit for $350,000 has been filed in federal court here by the Lake Tankers' Corporation, owner of the oil tanker Pinthis, against the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company, owners of the steamship Fairfax, which rammed and sank the Pinthis off Scituate, June 10, with a loss of 47 lives.

The sum of $350,000 is the value put by the owner on the Pinthis and cargo.

TheMerchants & Miners line immediately filed a petition for limitation of liability. This action, customary in admiralty proceedings, is taken to limit total damages to the value of the surviving ship.

The Fairfax was valued at $1,350,000 when she was built in 1926. Depreciation and cost of repairs from the collision, estimated at $150,000, would give the Fairfax a present value of perhaps $1,150,000 or slightly less, it was estimated by counsel for the plaintiff.

This amount, if the petition for limitation of liability were granted, would be the utmost which could be recovered by litigants for the loss of the Pinthis and for the loss of life in the collision.

Quartermaster of the Fairfax Kept Diving to Keep From Burning Up

At least a score of persons were swimming about the Fairfax in flaming oil and clinging to burning lifeboats after the fire had swept the ship, according to J. V. Euback, quartermaster of the Fairfax, testifying at today's hearing.

Euback comes from Virginia.

"My clothes were burning and I jumped over the rail," he testified, "A lifeboat loomed in the fog. Five or six people in it. I made a grab for the rudder and missed. I made another grab and got hold of it. The motor had started and the boat was traveling through the flaming oil. Several were swimming near by and I yelled to them 'Grab hold of my legs.'

"They couldn't. One boy tried to, but he sank before he got to me. My clothes were burning so badly I had to let go.

KEPT DIVING.

"I swam about five feet under water. I dove and dove again. Again I came to the top, but soon afterward I started to burn up again. So I dove once more into five feet under. I came into a stretch of water that was not burning. I saw a naval lieutenant floating nearby with his wife. He had an extra life preserver. I asked him for it.

"He held it out to me. I swam and got it. When I took it, I felt some one tugging at it. I looked and saw Seabey, a waiter. I smashed him in the face. I got the life preserver on, then I saw others, two of them women, nearby. Through the fog I saw another life boat. It was burning. I told them to make for it, that it was their only chance.

CLIMBER INTO BOAT.

"They said, 'We will stay here.' The lieutenant and his wife gave me the belt said, 'Get away. I am drowning.' A man named Joe Coco was in the lifeboat. He climbed in the boat. I got sick and lay down. I must have fainted afterward. I think it was daylight when I heard the Fairfax blow four times. They started to drift up again. I was weak, but managed to bail it out some.

"A boat came by, close to our port side. She didn't hear us yelling for help.

"I tried to, to holler. He couldn't, he was too hoarse, and so was I. We tried to rig up a sail. It wasn't much use, long while afterward I saw a fishing vessel in the fog. I beat with a hatchet on a metal can. They heard us and a dory was pulover beside. They took us aboard and then to Boston."

Euback is about 25 years old. He showed the effects of his ordeal once and talked in low tones. It was difficult to hear his story.

By MAX PERLMANN
Universal Service Special Cable

Growing impatient at the princess mother's continued refusal to permit the annullment of their divorce and share his throne as consort, the king yesterday resorted to a legal technicality to supply a queen to his country.

His decree makes Helene queen on the ground that the divorce followed his father's—King Ferdinand's—death. Since the National Assembly's annullment of the abdication act of 1926 was retroactive, making Carol king from the moment of his father's death and ignoring the ad interim rule of Crown Prince Michael, Carol today reasoned that Helene was Queen of Rumania at the time of the divorce.

FOLLOWS MARIE'S RETURN

At the Gotroceni Castle railroad station, when the queen mother's train pulled in, waited both King Carol and his former wife, Princess Helene. The princess stood at one end of the platform surrounded by her suite. At the other end stood the king, at the head of a company of special soldiers.

Neither gave recognition of the other's presence. Carol, as the train came to a halt bared his head and stepped up to his mother's car. As the queen descended he seized her hand and raised it to his lips.

Their meeting was most affectionate. There was no indication of the rift between them that earlier reports had declared, would lead to Carol asking his mother not to return to Rumania from Obersammergau.

It is believed that the Queen Mother hopes to bring her son and his former wife together sometime over the weekend. It is her conviction that if the king and princess have the opportunity to calmly discuss their problems in private a reconciliation will ensue.

MOTHER LOVE APPEAL

Marie hopes that she will be able to base her deciding argument on Princess Helene's mother love for eight-year-old Crown Prince Michael. Marie herself, has a deep affection for the young former King, and she is expected to point out to the Princess that the young Prince needs an ever-present mother to assist in his education, now entrusted to his father.

In an effort to prepare the ground for Queen Marie's arguments, Prince Nicholas and Queen Elizabeth of Greece yesterday spent an hour with Princess Helene.

Pope Pius yesterday forwarded his congratulations to King Carol through the medium of the Papal Nuncio at Bucharest. Other European sovereigns, among them King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, sent their best wishes.

The awkward political situation faced by the king today became even more embarrassing when General Presan notified his ruler that he had been unable to form a coalition cabinet. The general was charged with forming a cabinet after former Premier Manlu's failure yesterday.

HUNT WIT, SON OF SHOE MAN

Police and the Wolf Secret Service Bureau of 12 West st., are today searching for Richard M. Wit, 17, Newton High school student, the son of Manuel Wit, vice-president of the Traveler Shoe Co.

He is described as being 5 feet, 11 inches tall, weighs 160 pounds, has black wavy hair, dark brown eyes, dark complexion, was wearing a blue suit, black shoes, no hat and a green sweater.

$70,000 Auto Planned to Hit 300-Mile Clip

The British government has agreed to lend Smith an engine to develop nearly 2,000 horsepower.

The Farewell to a Beloved Wife and Mother While Whole State Mourns

AT THE CURLEY LOT in Old Calvary Cemetery just before Mrs. James M. Curley, late wife of the mayor, was tenderly lowered into her grave beside her three children. Mayor Curley, his daughter and sons, the youngest being hidden by the flowers, stood before the casket in mournful meditation. The cemetery, like at the cathedral service and at the Jamaicaway home, was the gathering place for thousands, who joined with the mayor in his sorrow.

From all walks and all stations of life men, women and children joined in a profound, impressive and unprecedented tribute.

The solemn magnificence of the Catholic funeral ritual within the Cathedral of the Holy Cross; Cardinal O'Connell's eulogy in words as simple, yet glowing beautiful, as had been her life, the mourning of dignitaries of city, State and nation, who admired and respected her; the simple sorrow of thousands of children who stood with their elders in the thronged streets as the cortege passed—these were accorded her in the obsequies.

MULTITUDE IN GRIEF.

From the Curley home in the Jamaicaway to the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, and from the shadow of the cathedral cross to the quiet peace of Old Calvary, green and warm with the spring, the procession of sorrow passed between lines of thousands genuinely affected by Mrs. Curley's death.

The machinery of city government was for a time at a standstill. In all public schools as the solemn high mass of requiem was begun at the Cathedral, teachers and pupils paused in their studies, and in the cases of those schools near the route of the procession, classes stood at the curbs as the cortege passed.

The office of the district attorney was closed from 9 o'clock until noon. City Hall was practically deserted and at the State House department heads were missing from their accustomed places.

James M. Curley, the man whose ambition she inspired and whose life she moulded with the deft touches of her love and personality, bore well the test of sorrow, yet was visibly affected by the public outpouring of sympathy.

So, too, were the six children of James and Mary Curley whose mothering she found a duty of the greatest joy.

BORNE FROM HOME

The cortege of about 200 limousines left the Jamaicaway home for the Cathedral at 9:40 a. m., the casket being borne from the house by Drs. Martin J. English, Archibald M. Fraser and Charles Wheiton, physicians who attended Mrs. Curley in her last illness; Gen. Edward L. Logan, City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan, Francis J. Brennan and Thomas J. Johnson.

The blinds of neighboring homes were drawn, several thousand stood bareheaded in the streets and a detail of fire department officers was drawn up beside the hearse while the orchid and lily-covered casket was placed within.

In the background, the grounds of the Curley home had been transformed into a veritable garden of spring blooms overflowing from floral pieces that filled the house itself.

Mayor Curley, with Mary, the only living daughter, on his arm, and the youngest son entered the first car behind the hearse. In the following rode the other four sons.

All along the route to the Cathedral, through Morsins, Center and Tremont sts., down West Newton to Washington and Union Park, thousands lined the sidewalks, heads bowed and uncovered, handkerchiefs in evidence.

In the immediate neighborhood of the Cathedral, massed on the west side of Washington st., from Union Park st. to West Newton, thousands who could not gain admission to the church were waiting. On roofs and balconies of houses facing the church were other hundreds.

BURST INTO TEARS

Weeping among the spectators was audible as the cortege slowly approached the Cathedral from West Newton st., and the great crowd congregated in the environs seemed suddenly to burst into tears as the casket was withdrawn from the hearse.

Many women knelt.

Deployed about the Cathedral and in the adjacent thoroughfares were 180 patrolmen and officers in command of Deputy Superintendent Good.

At the portals waited Arthur B. Corbett, William J. McMorrow, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and former Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, who directed the mourners.

Ushers within the church were Congressmen George Holden Tinkham, John J. Douglass and John W. McCormack, J. Philip O'Connell, Joseph A. Rourke, Arthur B. Corbett, Philip A. Chapman, Cornelius A. Reardon, Henry F. Brennan, John F. Fitzgerald, Edward P. Barry, Joseph P. Lomasney, William G. O'Hare, Frank J. Long and George J. Regan.

4000 IN CATHEDRAL

Within the Cathedral were seated 4000 persons, with many others standing. All but 500 of those seated were men, women and children numbered among the immediate friends of the Curley family and for whom reservations had been made.

Cardinal O'Connell occupied his crimson throne on the gospel side of the altar. Chaplains attending him were Rt. Rev. Mgr. Ambrose Roche, pastor of St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain, and the Lord Abbot Dolan, O. S. B., of St. Anslem's College, Manchester, N. H.

Bishop John B. Peterson, rector of St. Catherine's Church, Somerville, occupied his episcopal seat on the epistle side of the altar.

In the sanctuary choir and overflowing into the first two rows of the pews on the gospel side of the chancel were seated 100 priests.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin, vicar-general of the archdiocese and pastor of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem.

A close friend of Mrs. Curley for many years, the Rev. James F. Kelley, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, where she worshipped, was deacon of the mass. The sub-deacon was the Rev. Neil A. Cronin, D.D., administrator of the Cathedral, and the master of ceremonies was the Rev. John R. Wall of the Cathedral staff.

As Cardinal O'Connell spoke the simple and beautiful words of the eulogy he was greatly affected and hushed sobs filled the great church.

NOTABLES PRESENT

Among those in attendance at the Cathedarl service were Governor Allen and three military aides; former Governor and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Lieut. Gov. John S. Youngman, Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the Senate; former Mayor and Mrs. Malcolm E. Nichols, Judge Daniel T. O'Connell, Clerk John F. Cronin of the Supreme Court; Eben S. Draper, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, Sheriff John A. Keliher and his aides, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and his aides, James F. Powers, of the Governor's Council, and a host of other notables.

The musical program of the mass was ended with the strains of "Jesus, Saviour of My Soul," which was Mrs. Curley's favorite hymn. The mass itself was sung by a double quartet, Mrs. Julia Herrick, Miss Gertrude Anderson, Miss Emma Ecker, Miss Nora Burns, John J. Shaughnessy, James Ecker, Joseph Ecker and Joseph Mikolojewski. Lawrence B. O'Connor and Philip Ferraro were the organists.

2 ADMIT AYER BURGLARIES

Ayer, June 13 (AP)—Harry C. Young of Methuen and Frank Agofsky of Bridgeport, Conn., alleged bandits, were arraigned today on charges of breaking, entering and larceny and were held in $12,500 bail each. They pleaded not guilty.

Young and Agofsky were arrested in Nashua, N. H., in a police round-up during which Agofsky's brother, Joseph, was fatally shot. The trio was wanted in several New England communities for robberies.

The two arraigned today were charged with entering Fletcher's department store and stealing a large quantity of clothing. They told the court of their activities and Young admitted having been on guard with a gun while the other two robbed the store. They said they went to New York in a stolen automobile after the robbery and later returned in another stolen car. On their second visit they broke into a filling station, they said.

The car, according to police, was driven by Hill. Albert Lambert of Holyoke, a passenger, was uninjured.

Wants Colby College on Site in Augusta

Waterville, Me., June 13—Colby College, located here since its founding 109 years ago, today was offered a site of 600 acres in Augusta, contingent on the raising of $2,500,000 over the next three years.

The proposal, set forth in a letter from William H. Gannett, Augusta publisher, addressed to the board of trustees of the institution, was laid on the table.

WALSH FEARED RELIGIOUS CRY

Washington, June 13 (AP)—To avoid any charge of attempting to persecute Bishop Cannon, Jr., Senator Walsh of Montana today abandoned his proposal to seek specific Senate authority for the lobby committee to investigate political activities.

"I think such a resolution should be introduced," he said, "but I shall not introduce it. The bishop has repeatedly charged that his investigation was a Catholic and not persecution. Since I am a humble member of the Catholic church, I would immediately be charged with attempting to persecute him. Therefore, I shall take no further action."

WALSH VOTED DOWN

The Montana Democrat, who is a prohibitionist, was voted down three to one yesterday in an attempt to have the lobby committee ask for Senate authority which would allow it to question the Southern Methodist bishop about his 1928 anti-Smith activities.

The committee also voted four to one yesterday against a proposal by Senator Blaine (Rep.) of Wisconsin, to cite Cannon's refusal to answer questions to the Senate for possible contempt proceedings.

Blaine declined to say whether he plans any further action. The Wisconsin senator contends, however, that when the record of the lobby proceedings is laid before the Senate, the Vice-President is required by law to submit it to the district attorney to present to a grand jury.

CURTIS ON FENCE

Chairman Caraway contends the law would not apply because the committee had decided it had no right to ask the questions the bishop refused to answer.

Walsh expressed the opinion that no more witnesses would be questioned by the committee and that its hearings were ended.

B. & M. Expenses for Lobby Were $5000

The Boston & Maine Railroad paid its legislative counsel, James R. Brown, $5000 and expenses amounting to $167, for representing the road's interests before committees of the General Court, a return filed with the secretary of state today disclosed.

The Floyd Milk Company paid $867.10 to Cornelius A. Parker for services as counsel in connection with proposed legislation to change the definition of pasteurized milk, and the Whiting Milk Companies paid John F. Cusick $1500 as legislative counsel.

CARDINAL PAYS TRIBUTE TO MRS. CURLEY

Lauds Memory in Eulogy Delivered at Services at Cathedral

"The whole community has been stirred to deepest sympathy in witnessing for two long years the heroic Christian fortitude with which this remarkable woman, true wife and mother, has borne the unspeakable pain and suffering of a lingering illness. She was all her life entirely devoted to her Christian duty as wife and mother. And even when stricken with the dread disease which brought her face to face with death when humanly speaking she had everything to live for—she arose to heroic and sublime heights of patience and complete submission to God's mysterious design—acknowledging his divine will in all things in life and death.

"Endowed with extraordinary intelligence, she exhibited all her life, had everything in the long hours of trial, the most simple and sublime faith; and to the knowledge of God's mysteries she humbly bowed her head without a murmur or complaint. Again and again in that room of suffering I have been the witness of a faith and confidence in God which moved me to the depths of admiration.

"And now she is at rest after a life of devoted and faithful service and I vow for her devoted husband and children to whom she has left an imperishable memory a noble christian soul.

"To him who now with the great public burden he bears must bow under this great grief the whole community offers with our prayer for her eternal peace in the Lord, the deep, sincere and affectionate condolence.

"Under a strain which few could bear without breaking, he has faced his daily task with a breaking heart but a courageous mien and unconquerable will. One united prayer today is that God may grant her rest and him the consolation and strength and grace to help him to bear his great grief."

HOOVER AGAIN FOR SECRECY

Washington, June 13—The administration continued today to stand by its announced policy that the Senate foreign relations committee must pass on the naval treaty "from the document itself," and refused to submit to the committee specific questions touching the conference in London.

Secretary of State Stimson notified the committee of the administration's attitude today in a note acknowledging receipt of the committee's resolution asking it for it had it had a right to consider all correspondence exchanged on the pact.

STIMSON'S NOTE

Addressed to Senator Borah (R.), Idaho, chairman of the committee, the note read:

"I have received your favor today transmitting a copy of a resolution of the committee on foreign relations in respect to letters and documents in the recent negotiations of the naval treaty.

"I did not, in my letter to you of June 6, attempt to define the duties of the Senate or the scope of its power in passing upon treaties. My statement in that letter that 'the question whether this treaty is or is not in the interests of the United States and should or should not be ratified by the Senate must in the last event be determined from the language of the documents itself and not from extraneous matter,' was intended to call attention to the fact that the obligations and rights arising from the treaty as in the case of any other contract, must be measured by the language of the document itself.

No meeting of the committee was held today because of early convening of the Senate to act on the tariff bill.

WILL MEET MONDAY

Borah said the committee would meet Monday and he expects the treaty will be approved early in the week.

President Hoover called in Senator Moses (R), New Hampshire, today for an hour's conference. Moses has lined up with the opposition to the treaty and was one of the 10 members of the foreign relations committee who voted for the resolution yesterday asserting a claim to the London notes.

The New Hampshire senator declined to comment upon his White House visit.

Heat Victim Crippled

3 HELD IN N. Y. IN HUB RUM SWINDLE

Boston police were notified today the arrest in New York of four men wanted here in connection with the so-called "imported liquor racket" exposed by the Boston Evening American some time ago.

The men were arrested on complaint of Rosabelle Cohen, secretary to a wealthy New York business man, after they had attempted to collect $120 for a shipment of liquor which turned out to be water.

It was revealed that in five months $1 complaints have been made to Boston police of similar attempts three of which were successful in obtaining $1000 in each instance.

Five weeks ago under orders from Police Commissioner Multinan and Superintendent Crowley, Inspectors George Augusta and William LeBlanc were assigned to the cases.

While they refused to discuss the matter, it was learned police have sent New York authorities considerable data.

In Boston the "grafters" worked in two groups of three men each, basing their play on the absence in Europe of local business men. His business associates or secretary would receive a fake cablegram, apparently from the business man, stating he had made a "purchase" in Europe and that it was coming over by boat. In a short time a man would call at the office, refer to the cablegram, and agree to make delivery for a stipulated amount. If the offer was accepted the liquor invariably turned out to be water, but in the majority of cases the persons approached became suspicious.

Ritchie Says Dry Law Injures Canada

Toronto, June 13 (AP)—Governor Ritchie of Maryland said in a banquet speech last night that prohibition in the United States had placed burdens on Canada which one nation should not expect another to assume.

"International good-will cannot be furthered by a situation which requires that the United States must ask a neighbor to adopt laws with the sole object of helping her to enforce her own," he added.

Will Honor Civilians in Laying of Keel

Portsmouth, N. H., June 13 (AP)—Capt. David F. Boyd, acting commandant of the navy yard here, today announced that civilian employes would be accorded the honors incident to laying the keel of the new fleet submarine V-7 tomorrow morning. The driving of the first rivet and other honors, usually accorded naval officials, will be shared by the civilians as a mark of confidence in their workmanship, the announcement said.

14 Prisoners Dig Tunnel to Liberty

Buenos Aires, June 13 (AP)—Fourteen prisoners in the city jail at Villa Maria, Cordoba, escaped from their prison last night through a tunnel which they had constructed. Prison officials said the work must have taken at least one month.

Letters from Readers of the Evening American

Rum Is Big Problem in College Today

Editor Boston American:

Some young people have strange ideas today. A speaker in Springfield a short time ago said:

"The majority of the young people's ideas are those of the bootlegger."

This means a great many squeeze past the common law. The higher law of the conscience, they cannot monkey with.

The burden upon colleges today is the excessive, uncontrolled use of liquor and autos by students. Many young people are suffering from a wrong sense of values. They are away off.

If you use your razor to make kindlings with, you can't keep it fit for a shave, can you? If you use a gold pointed pen for a corkscrew, you can't write with that pen. What we will not do with the larger interests of life, we tag on to the smaller ones. Students often try to argue with themselves that petting, drinking, cheating in examinations may be diluted, so that they will get through by the skin of teeth. Some do get by. But it is the aftermath of this gamble that stings. College life today needs higher ideals. There is too much pretty shallow ploughing.

ROBERT T. SPEER.

Has Never Forgotten Sea Disaster

Editor Boston American:

There is another tragedy on the sea. The Fairfax-Pinthis disaster is now added to the list. Your editorial moved me to write this letter, because I was in the disaster on the "Seawanka," when the ship almost burned to the water's edge on Long Island Sound, near Roslyn, many years ago.

I have never forgotten scenes on that burning boat and I have never boarded a vessel since then without some thought of that disaster. In fact, you cannot forget such events.

But what I'm getting at is this: Investigations follow always after such disasters. They do little good. They just open out the harrowing scenes. They cannot bring back the dead. If they could devise more means to prevent such tragedies, they would serve a good purpose. They often lose sight of this end.

They are a matter of form, often. This was evident in the tragedy I was in. There is the fog to deal with. It always seemed to me that captains are often forced to take risks when their own judgment would direct otherwise. This was so with the Portland boat disaster years ago.

Praises Fight for Gold Star Mothers' Voyage

Editor Boston American:

A year or so ago the Boston American, aided in the fight to send the Gold Star Mothers to the last resting place of their beloved sons, who had given their all for their country.

Today in a newsreel, I witnessed what a wonderful thing they had helped to put across.

In this cemetery of a thousand and more little white crosses, these dear old souls with their heads bending in grief, their legs tottering, with the burden they had so wonderfully suppressed all these years, stood for the first time before the shrine of their all, and bitterly wept the tears that they had so bravely held back.

Who could sit in the theater and see these mothers pat the soil that covered their boys, without tears blinding their eyes, not matter whether they were big business men, bootleggers, stern judges, and even gun men for there is something divine in a mothers love that reaches out to the most calous of souls.

The flowers that grow on these mounds in the future should be more beautiful than ever, watered by the divine tears of these mothers, and to those who are fortunate enough to see this short subject in the newsreel it should chisel a stronger love, and respect for the most wonderful thing in this world "Mother."

In conclusion let me thank the Boston American as an excellent service man and buddie of those who sleep beneath the little white cross in France for its assistance in the fight for these brave little women.

EX-SERVICE MAN.

So. End Not as Bad as District Seems

Editor Boston American:

These continual reports of speakeasies and disorderly houses in the South End should be more carefully analyzed than they too generally are.

The public at large is getting the idea that this part of Boston is made up of very disreputable people—an idea that is very far from the truth, and I will show why.

The majority of the people of the South End are good, respectable, upright people—and VERY BUSY about their own business—too busy to be attending to their neighbor's affairs in an official way, they are not fond of lawsuits, and appearances in court are apt to be detrimental to their full day's work—so they mind their OWN BUSINESS.

Along comes some person or persons looking for a place for a speakeasy, or disorderly house—where to locate it with the best chance of an uninterrupted career? WHERE THE RESIDENTS are too honest to suspect, and too busy to bother with it unless it hits them personally.

If the rating of the clients of these places were to be based on the place of origin of the client—their real proper residential district (as it must be in order to obtain a correct, moral geographical survey), then the South End would come through as it should with flying colors.

Years Changed Park Street for the Better

Editor Boston American:

I could not help thinking what I read lately about Park st. What it was formerly and what it is today.

Formerly on this street was found the almshouse and workhouse as well as a granary. Members who sit reading the newspapers with back to the street in the rooms of the Union Club do not realize that they are sitting on the spot where persons were housed who were too scandalous even to be treated at the almshouse. It was "the seat of the mean, the foulminded, the tainted, the base, the debauched."

There they were classified as such and there they raved and seethed in their own corruption.

But how changed is that street today, laid out by Bulfinch in 1803. There are saints on Park st. today, compared with those who lived and had their being there in the last century. Boston may lose in population, but it has wonderfully improved since early times.

Other Forces Deserve Credit for Ballot Work

Editor Boston American:

It was stated this past week at one of the social service conferences that the typewriter alone had done more for women than the ballot ever will. Some Bostonians rather squirmed at this remark. Much is being done in this city through different organizations to encourage women to value the use of the ballot.

Such organizations as the Massachusetts League of Women Voters as well as Boston League of Women Voters in encouraging women to vote, must not be overlooked in this matter. They have done much. But the young women graduating from school and colleges are forced to regard the typewriter as a better friend of theirs in need than the ballot.

They must earn a living, and typewriting is a great opening for them. In many cases it is the only opening. They regard the typewriter as a more helpful friend than any other agency. Women are beginning to feel to get their living they should have two trades or vocations. There are hundreds of women today in Boston looking for something to pay their board with.

Thanks American for Dwyer Fund Support

Editor Boston American:

As treasurer of the Franklin B. Dwyer Fund, I wish to take this opportunity of thanking the Boston Evening American for the co-operation they have given us in helping us to raise money for the widow of the late Patrolman Franklin B. Dwyer.

I wish also especially to mention the hearty co-operation and the willingness of your reporter, Al Supple, who has been right on the job and covered this detail in a very favorable and conscientious manner.

Quoting a Bryan Story to Aid Dry Cause

Editor Boston American:

When the late William Jennings Bryan was attending the Billy Sunday revivals in Boston some years ago, he told me this story after leaving the Huntington ave. grounds where these meetings were held. It may be an old yarn, but something was said yesterday at one of these social meetings that recalled it.

A man said to his friends:

"I am drinking too much. I know it, but I can't help it. My friends keep asking me to drink and the first thing I know, I get too much."

His friend replied:

"I will tell you how to prevent it. After this, when you get all the whiskey you want and anybody asks you to have more, don't call for it; call for sarsaparilla."

But the man retorted:

"That's just the trouble, when I get all the whiskey I want, I can't say sarsaparilla."

This Mr. Bryan used as an argument in favor of prohibition. It is a pretty good argument of its kind.

STRAWBERRIES FLOOD MARKET

Native strawberries, so large that six could fill a dish, featured a flood of all kinds of berries on sale at Faneuil Hall market today. The best natives appear from Concord, selling at 45 and 50 cents a quart. New Jersey strawberries are on hand in large quantities at 25 and 30 cents a quart.

A flood of raspberries from California are selling at 40 cents a pint. They are fresh and dewy although they have come here after a five-day trip in refrigerator cars. Blackberries and blueberries are both on hand and feature excellent quality and reasonable price.

Other fruits are reasonable and plentiful with the exception of oranges.

Fish, expected to drop in price this week, remains high due to the foggy weather.

There is little change in meat with last week's prices still prevailing. Lamb is showing some tendency to tighten its prices. Rib lamb chops are 50 to 60 cents and kidney lamb chops, 70 to 75 cents a pound, with prospects of increased prices when the summer season gets under way.

Poultry costs are not varying this week. Squabs, both native and California, are very reasonable. Eggs do not change in price, fresh table eggs selling at 50 cents, eastern, 45 cents and Western, 40 cents a dozen.

Vegetables are plentiful and quite cheap. Asparagus, with which the market was heavily supplied a few weeks ago, is still cheap. It is now selling at 20 and 25 cents a bunch in the stalls.

Butter prices remain about the same with the exception of sweet butter, which is cheaper. The finest grades of fresh Vermont butter sell at 68 instead of 75 cents a pound.

THE DAILY HUBBUB

By ANTHONY SKELDING

STENOGS, MEN AND DOGS

The Park Square Building is the largest office structure in the city . . . some 5000 or more people work under its roof. More than 1200 of them are employed by the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. The local offices of the Standard Oil Co. has almost as many more. The chief despatcher or the building who looks after the elevators and things is Albert Peterson. Albert told us that there were a good many important people in the various offices . . . then he told us about himself. He was formerly in the Coast Guard service chasing rum runners, but gave up that exciting career to go into a regular business . . . besides, despatching elevators was much safer.

"The most exciting things I see around here," said Albert, "are the date-makers who meet in the corridor.

We asked Albert who were the really important people? The obliging starter reeled them off —— "There's Chester Rahr, he's a toff of the first order . . . the swellest dresser in the building. Holds a big job with the Flintcote Company. Say, that guy has more spats than any one I know of . . . gloves to match, too. Carries a cane like he always had one and don't get himself tripped up with it either."

CHAMPION BIG MAN

Albert went on —— "The biggest man in the building is John Ladd. He weighs over 400 pounds . . . important member of the Fat Men's Club of America. He has a little trouble getting in and out the elevators . . . takes the place of three or four regular passengers. Mr. Ladd is considerate about this though . . . he waits patiently for room. When he rides other than an elevator is about one half full or more he waits for the next car. Yeah. He's up and down all day long making for the lunch room . . . eight meals per day he takes. I think the man eats too much," Albert concluded.

OTHER CELEBRITIES

"Maj. Carrol Swan of American Legion fame holds forth in this building," said Albert—— "The major is a very busy man. Always on the rush. In fact he is so busy most of the time that he forgets and grabs the first car at hand . . . quite often he gets the express and has to take a round trip to get to his office on the fourth floor. Same goes for Reginald Bird . . . the big Flintcote manufacturer from Walpole. Mr. Bird is a great horse and dog man . . . always brings his English setter to work with him. . . . No there ain't no rule against dogs in this building. Mr. Conway on the fourth floor has a dog, too . . . police dog. He's a wise guy (I mean the dog) —knows the right floor to get off at every time, and can open the revolving street door with his paw." "Anbody else?" we asked . . . "perhaps a lady with some personality?" "Yes," said Albert, "we have a Mrs. Marion Stone. The only lady proprietor of a man's barber shop in the city . . . she runs a 10-chair shop. No, she don't do any shaving herself. She just takes in the money, that's all."

AMONG THE MUTUAL PEOPLE

We popped up to the offices of the Mutual Co. and talked with Mr. Henry DeForrest, general information man for the company. There was a lot going on there, said Mr. DeForest—"With so many good looking stenographers around, some guy is always getting hooked up here. The casualties happen every month or so. Right now we have another engaged couple on our hands. . . . . Margaret Clancy and Jim Cashin are to be married the 30th of this month. They are going to Canada on their honeymoon. Margaret quits her job, but Jim, of course, will stay on. Will he get a raise to meet the deficit? Well, I don't know. . . . Let's hope so." Henry went on—"Funny thing, you know . . . the prettiest girls sometimes hang out the longest. Hilda Robinson is the best looker we have. That gal wouldn't give a smile to Rudy Valee. . . . But never mind, some chap will get her yet." . . . "Bunny Fink was another good looker . . . she's a tap and fancy dancer." We learned from Mr. DeForrest that there was also some talent among the male workers. Robert Bates flew his own plane, and did some trick parachute jumping . . . was going to turn a couple of flops over the top of the building some day just to show the gang what he could do. John W. Phillips gives color to the office with his English accent and horsey gossip . . . . . wears his riding boots to business sometimes. Bennett Moore writes business articles for Forbes' Magazine and Printers' Ink. Leonard Nason once worked here for $35 per week, and snitched enough of the companies' time to write a war novel, "Chevrons." He then made the Saturday Evening Post, and quit his job. "Yes," concluded Mr. DeForrest, "There's adventure even in this business."

CANADA PAPER MERGER NEAR

New York, June 13—Anglo-Canadian Pulp & Paper Mills, Ltd., will merge with Canada Power & Paper Corporation, controlled by the Holt-Gundy group, said Lord Rothermere, president of Anglo-Canadian Pulp. The amalgamation will result in the largest newsprint manufacturing corporation in the British Empire.

No financing is contemplated, as the mergers will be effected by exchange of one ordinary share of Anglo-Canadian Pulp & Paper Mills for 2⅝ common shares of Canada Power & Paper Corporation. The latter will assume the outstanding debenture obligations and guarantee the dividends on the outstanding 7 per cent preferred of the former company.

Lord Rothermere said: "Although the guarantee of debentures is assumed by Canada Power, owners of the debentures will continue to hold the guarantee of Daily Mirror Newspapers, Ltd., and Sunday Pictorial Newspapers (1920), Ltd., the companies that guaranteed the issue prior to the public offer in England.

"Daily capacity of production of the combined companies will be approximately 2300 tons of newsprint, plus a large tonnage of pulp, kraft and board paers.

"Present shareholders of Anglo-Canadian Pul & Paper Mills, Ltd., will be represented on the board of Canada Power & Paper Corp., of which approximately 97 per cent of the stock will be held by British and Canadian investors."

Canada Power & Paper Corp. will acquire properties estimated to contain 10,000,000 cords of pulpwood.

Beacon Hill Folk Stage Fete

Old Costumes Give Colonial Atmosphere to Program of Tercentenary Event

BEACON HILL TERCENTENARY day was a huge success. After the postponement, because of rain, the sun shone on Old Boston and the anticipated festivities went off with a bang. Governor Winthrop and his party only were missing, and that because he could not be in two places at once and he was scheduled to be in Salem for their "birth of a nation" yesterday.

THE BEACON HILL BELLES were gorgeous in their treasured finery, very much be-feathered and be-frilled. Mrs. Francis Cummings was fetching in paisley voile with poke leghorn; Mrs. William H. Goodwin, Jr., might have stepped out of an old album in her golden brown taffeta and enormous green taffeta poke; Miss Charlotte Jealous and Mrs. Paul Revere appeared as porcelains in their panier silks; Miss Susan L. Oliver was serene and handsome in green flowered taffeta with tiny Chantilly lace shawl fastened with a magnificent cameo.

MISS GRACE LIVERMORE and Miss Peggy Read were adorable witches; the Misses Mabel Bell and Alice Burrage, 1930-31 debs, were piquant as Brittany maids with painted cart filled with flowers; Mrs. Albert Cushman, we are sure, had the largest bonnet seen during the day and she said that it created a furore when worn a century ago on Sunday at the Old South Church; a bride of 1812 was Miss Juliet Richardson and, strange to say, she did not look very out-of-date with her long empire gown and old-fashioned bouquet.

QUITE THE HIT OF THE day, we think, was little Miss Josephine Swift Doane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Doane of 65A Charles st., looking like a darling doll with a basket on her arm selling elephants for the Christopher Shop. She had real sales ability. There was fortune telling by a real Indian and Miss Ada Dewson, looking charming in cap and gown, had charge of this feature.

MRS. ALEXANDER GRANT had the most unique costume, a huge hoop-skirt made of pockets in which were grabs for the kiddies. It was called a "good-girl costume because it had two faces and two pairs of arms, we presume to fool the geese when the goose-girl fell asleep. The lovely homes and gardens were opened and a large crowd took advantage of the opportunity to inspect them.

Will Be Bride Next Week

MISS ELEANOR DRINKWATER, who is to become the bride of Edward G. Pinkerton on June 19. (Photo by Bachrach.)

Eleanor Drinkwater Selects Attendants for Wedding, June 19

MISS ELEANOR DRINKWATER will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. William B. Rice, when she is married to Edward G. Pinkerton on June 18 at Cohasset. Her bridesmaids will be Mrs. Theodore Haviland, 2d (Frances Meade), Eleanor Clarke, Mrs. Daniel J. Veal, Elsie Normandie, Mrs. Arthur A. Hamilton, Miss Margaret Watson and Miss Dolores de Pierrefue of Milton.

JAMES B. PINKERTON WILL be his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Messrs. Charles B. Grieve, Jr., and Henry Trask of New York, Theodore Haviland, 2d, Joseph Walton, Davis C. Drinkwater, Albion C. Drinkwater, William Ball Rice and Rupert Koblegard, 2d, of Florida. The bride-elect made her debut at a luncheon at the Somerset several years ago and is a member of the Junior League. Her engagement was announced at a tea a year ago at her parents' home, The Ledges, at Cohasset.

Griselda Forbes to Make Debut in Hub Society Next Winter

MR. AND MRS. J. GRANT FORBES are coming to Boston for the winter to bring out their daughter, Miss Griselda Forbes, who was presented to the Court of St. James during the past season. The Forbes have lived in England for the past 10 years. Mrs. Forbes, as Margaret Winthrop, used to take leading roles in the Vincent Club shows. Miss Griselda has many relatives in Boston, her grandmother, Mrs. Francis B. Forbes of Commonwealth ave.; an aunt, Mrs. Austin Potter (Evelyn Forbes) of Wellesley, and the J. Murray Forbes of Milton.

Club Formed by Friends of Dartmouth

Will Seek Membership in State Federation in Fall; Plan Scholarship

By NANCY BREWSTER

The Dartmouth Matrons' Club, a group of mothers and wives of Dartmouth men, has just been formed and with the fall opening of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, will petition for membership in this parent body.

Three-fold are the objects of the club, the primary purpose, however, is the founding of a scholarship for the study of international affairs at Geneva. A Dartmouth man was this year chosen one of the eight selected from different American colleges to go to Geneva to study, and since the boy with brains is not always the boy with wealth, the Dartmouth Matrons' Club considered such an object worthy of its pursuit.

Mrs. Frank F. Hill, whose idea this club was, conferred with President Martin Hopkins of Dartmouth, outlined the project to him and secured his approval.

Mrs. Edmund Strout Phinney of Roslindale, publicity chairman of the club, estimated that 650 Dartmouth graduates lived in Greater Boston.

To promote sociability and friendliness among the members and to maintain a hostess room at Hanover Inn during special events are also objects of the club.

Mrs. Phinney announces that any one joining the club through next October will be considered charter members. Mrs. Persis Blake of Woburn is the one to communicate with, if such membership is desired.

A week ago the executive board met and consisted of Mrs. F. F. Hill, Milton; Mrs. Persis Blake, Woburn; Mrs. Gertrude Pease, Beechmont, Mrs. Edward Pike, West Roxbury, and Mrs. Phinney, Roslindale. Mrs. Walter Harrisons drew up the constitution and became a member. Mrs. Herbert Jump, wife of Rev. Jump of the South End, was appointed chairman of the program committee.

Baby Blue and Pink at Sartorial Maturity

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, June 13.

THE SHADES of evening are pink and blue, as far as the ballroom and theater are concerned, anyway. Lately we have seen ever so many dresses in various shades of blue and pink, and somehow the rather insipid effect of the pale pink and pale blue tones of former years seems to be absent.

The shades used are so cleverly handled that they can be worn by the woman of mature years without bestowing on her that "babyish" effect that one somehow used to associate—and rightfully so—with frocks of pastel pink and pale blue. It is no doubt because frocks of such colors are treated to sophistication in line and detail, with an absence of "fussy" trimming. Thus the ultra naive and the extremely sophisticated find their expression in a modern evening frock.

Despite the liking shown for short wraps, there are many women here who prefer a wrap done in the grand manner, and for these clients, therefore, most couturiers are careful to include wraps of regal aspect in their various collections. Such a wrap is the one sketched for this page which is from the current Redfern collection.

It is of delicate aquamarine blue satin combined with a beautiful white fox. The especial chic of the coat is to be found in the cleverly cut circular flounces which form the skirt of the garment. It dips in a curving line from a point high at one side and falls in flaring godets to the heels at the opposite side and back.

Pale pink crepe romain, to be exact, a delightful delicate shade of shell-pink, makes the evening dress from Maggy Rouff. A low-pieced peplum, cut in full circular lines, ripples down to the center front, and is lost in the folds of the deep circular flounce which forms the lower part of the skirt. Folds of the material are laid in at either side above the hips and give a soft, unpressed bloused line to the bodice which is possessed of a clever neckline.

DEMAND ACTION IN LINGLE CASE

Chicago, June 13 (AP)—The cry for action in the hunt for the slayer of Alfred (Jake) Lingle Tribune reporter rose higher and higher today, but with no indication of any new clues.

Indignation over the murder was fast translating itself into criticism of police, of the city administration, even the Chicago crime commission, which one minister — the Rev. Phillip Yarrow—classified as "a lot of bunk." Dr. Yarrow, chairman of the political action committee of the Chicago federation of churches, called for a mass meeting for the expression of the ministry's "indignation,, over crime conditions.

FEW GANSTERS CAUGHT

Police motor squads cruised through every part of the city, making arrests; but the grist of arrests showed no well known gangsters. Out of the more than 600 men arrested, only a small percentage could be classified as gangsters.

Leaders of the Methodist, Lutheran and Presbyterian denominations announced that within a week they expected to have a unified expression of indignation.

Representatives of all Chicago daily newspapers printed in English adopted a resolution decrying "the intolerable outrages against civic decency and public security" which culminated in the cowardly murder of Alfred J. Lingle."

ASKS INVESTIGATION

Alderman Arthur Albert called for an investigation of the police department. "From top to bottom," said Albert, "smells to high heaven. It is the council's job to trace the stench to its source."

The Women's Chicago Beautiful Association adopted a resolution blaming "political control of the police department" for the "breakdown of city and county government."

LARGER SPEED BOAT FOR HUB AIRPORT URGED

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The need of a large, fast speed boat at the Boston Airport for use in event of forced landings in the harbor was cited today by Henry E. Wallis and Val Chick, survivors of the recent forced landing of the trio-motored Ford.

A boat is already in service at the port, but it is a small three-seater affair, and is utterly of no use when a big ship has to land in the water, Wallis asserted.

When the Ford came to rest in the bay, the first boat on the scene was one from the Noyes Marine Company, which had been cruising out in the harbor, and which dashed to the wreck. This boat took the greater part of the passengers to shore, and was of immeasurable assistance to the group sitting on the wings of the plane.

According to Wallis, the work of the city administration so far on the airport is to be highly commended. Last year when the first talk of a speed boat was heard, the present small one was procured. This was felt to be adequate, but subsequent happenings make it apparent that a larger boat is necessary.

"If such a boat is procured, some place to park it right on the water's edge must be devised," said Wallis. "If it is kept in a house, keys to the lock must be provided in every hangar and office on the field, and a certain number of airport attaches instructed in the operation of the craft. When a ship lands in the water, the first ones to the boat can launch it and start out to the plane.

"I am sure that the administration of the city, which has done such a remarkable piece of work so far on the airport, will see the need of a larger boat.

"After the tri-motor came to rest and the Noyes boat came alongside, we were all thankful that the airport boat was alongside almost simultaneously. It showed the high degree of efficiency. Airport Superintendent Edson has installed in the employees of the city at the port. I'm sure that assistance will continue to be rendered in as snappy a manner in the future, but I'd like to see a boat with more capacity and more speed bought by the city."

HERO MOTHERS REACH PARIS

Paris, June 13 (AP)—The sixth group of American Gold Star mothers arrived in Paris today from Cherbourg. All were well and anxious to begin their pilgrimage to the graves of their beloved ones. There were 226 women whose sons lie in five of the six American cemeteries, none being at Bony.

The mothers had a good passage from the United States but their landing was delayed by fog.

They will start for the battle front on Monday while the group of mothers now there will arrive in Paris Sunday concluding their pilgrimage. Three women of this latter group who are still on the sick list continued to improve.

Celery Sandwich Is Fine for Picnic Lunch

Mix four tablespoons finely chopped finely cut celery with one tablespoon finely chopped onion, 1-3 package of "more than cheese" and a few grains paprika. Spread two slices of buttered bread with the mixture and cover with buttered bread. Cut in two and wrap in wax paper for the picnic basket.

Saves Hands

SHORTCAKE TIPS THAT HELP

At a popular restaurant yesterday I was served what I think must have been the world's worst shortcake, and then and there determined to give a generous amount of space today to the printing of full directions for a shortcake that would have no family resemblance to Portland cement or India rubber, so here 'tis.

First, for a family of six, pick over two quarts of firm berries. Save out 12 for decorating, and crush the rest slightly—I use a potato masher — and cover with one cup and a half of granulated sugar. Place the bowl where it's warm but not too hot—the warming shelf in your gas range is about right—and proceed to bake the shortcake.

For this, sift two level cups of cake or pastry flour with five level teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of sugar. Cut four tablespoons of butter into the flour, using a wire blender or two knives. If you like an extra short shortcake, you can use five level tablespoons—and I mean measuring spoons—of butter.

Now mix with it enough ice cold milk to make a dough easy to handle—from three-quarters to a cupful is about right. Turn the shortcake out onto a well floured board and pat or roll to one-half inch thickness. Fit into oblong pan well greased. I'd rather make a large thin layer than a thick one which will have to be split while hot. Bake for 10 minutes in a piping hot oven, 450 deg. F. Turn out on cake cooler, and while cake is warm dot generously with butter. Just before you are ready to serve the shortcake, cut it in half and cover the lower half with a layer of sugared berries and syrup. Put on the second half and cover with more berries and syrup. Then add a jar of cream which has been whipped until frothy but not buttery, slightly sugared with confectioners' sugar, and flavored with a little vanilla. Add the 12 ornamental berries and serve at once.

WHAT TO USE

The question of how much food to provide for a picnic is often a puzzler. Don't plan to take too much. Perhaps these hints will help.

1 large cake, 10 inches in diameter, serves 16.

1½ dozen lemons will make enough lemonade for 20 to 25 people.

1 pt. of sandwich filling will make 24 sandwiches.

2-3 cup of creamed butter will spread 24 sandwiches.

1 to 4 lbs. of chicken will yield about 3 cups of diced meat.

1 lb. of cold boiled ham will serve 6 or 8 people.

1 lb. of meat loaf will serve 6 or 8 people.

Orange Ginger Ale

For an individual serving of this delicious beverage, combine 2-3 c. of orange juice with 1-3 c. of ginger ale. Pour over one-half glass of finely crushed ice and serve immediately.

Removes Stains

For perspiration stains around the arms of your dresses, sponge with strong borax water or soak in strong salt water. Bay rum will remove perspiration stains from linen.

A Medicine Tip

When pouring medicine from a bottle that has prescription number on it, pour the medicine from the opposite side to keep the label clean.

Furniture Cleaner

Harding Portrait

Washington, June 13 (US)—An oil painting of the late President Harding is to be hung in the White House along with those of other Presidents after an unprecedented delay of seven years, it was learned here.

Here's Treat For Campers

Hungry hikers returning campward, sniff the air expectantly. Coffee, yes. Bacon? Of course. But something else. What is that rich, satisfying aroma that buries impatient feet into a dog-trot? Must be something new in the way of a picnic treat.

And so it is. Luscious, tasty, spaghetti, ready cooked and flavored with delicate tomato sauce and the zest of cheese. Carried safely in its handy can and reheated in the can over the campfire in boiling water, or turned into the sizzling frying pan, to give it the real open fire flavor, this kitchen favorite has now found a place in the camper's pack. No fuss or bother, and every can just as good as the one before.

Take along two or three cans on your next picnic or overnight tramp, and you'll reserve space for it in your camping kit for evermore.

When Making Curtains

MARKET WATCH TOWER SURVEY

Latest reports from the Watch Tower are cheerful for the thrifty housewife. Native lettuce is low, some stalls selling three heads for 10 cents. Native iceberg is 10 cents a head and higher. Purple top turnips are coming in through the farmers' market at 5 and 10 cents per bunch and native bunched beets are with us. Asparagus prices are easier (in the language of Wall Street), also cucumbers and tomatoes. Green and wax beans are plentiful and low, but peas are higher, alas.

Boston welcomed the first Massachusetts strawberries last week and today many city stands are offering quart baskets of Cape, Dighton and Concord berries for 35 to 50 cents. Blackberries, blueberries and a few raspberries are beginning to be seen. Plums and peaches are also among those present, although not in any great numbers.

Eggs are still at bottom prices and show no signs of going higher right away. Massachusetts specials retail for 30 and 35 cents a dozen in nearby towns.

Fish and meat counter prices remain practically unchanged. Lobsters are higher, but mackerel is cheap, mostly at 10 cents per pound. Fresh killed roosters are 25 to 32 cents.

Stuffed Leg of Lamb For Sunday Dinner

To make the in-laws open their eyes next Sunday, why not a Stuffed Leg of Lamb? Have your butcher remove the bone from the leg, leaving a hollow center. Make a filling of bread crumbs, about 6 oz., ½ lb. of ground salt pork, 1 egg, 1 tbsp. minced onion and 1 c. of chopped mushrooms, if convenient. Stuff, sew up and roast as usual. Yum! Yum!

Salt Helps Vegetables To Keep Their Color

Boiled green vegetables keep their color better if a little extra salt is added to the water in which they are boiled, and if they are cooked in an uncovered kettle.

Cool Dish on Hot Days

In the cool depths of a bowl of crackers and milk we find an appetizing, healthful, summertime lunch as beneficial for the busy bees as for sturdy children.

Especially if the crackers are those delicious cream lunch biscuits that come in the popular two-pound family package. The wax wrapping locks out moisture and locks in the oven crispness and guards the fine taste of these popular lunch biscuits.

Every cracker is baked to a glorious brown bloom, oven-fresh, flaky and dimpled. For economy, for health and for general enjoyment, do plan a cracker and milk lunch at least two or three times a week.

Erases Iodine Stains

To take out iodine stains use rubbing alcohol or soak in kerosene and then wash on washboard with a brush on which half a c. of washing powder is sprinkled. Rub well and wring.

THINK of it! A regular pint jar of Cain's famous mayonnaise or sandwich spread . . . and a handsome, colored glass, heat-resisting cup and saucer . . . all for A3c!

Ask your dealer for this combination today.

NEW ENGLAND DRESSED FRESH PORK

As FRESH As Newly Cut Asparagus

Fresh Asparagus—and Fresh Pork. Two foods widely apart in flavor and in dietary functions—yet absolutely equal in one important respect. To be at their best, both must be absolutely Fresh. You select Asparagus when in season, very, very carefully. You always take pains to note if the delicate tips are wilted—you certainly would not buy "over-ripe" asparagus. Now let's see about Fresh Pork. Do you always know whether it is New England Dressed or Pork shipped long distances. Do you just say to the butcher, "I want a Roast of Pork." You wouldn't buy an automobile that way—or a vacuum cleaner—you should be more discriminating in Pork selection.

After all, it is so easy to tell the difference. All you have to do is to assure yourself that anyone of the brands shown below is stamped on the back of the loin. That is the mark that goes on all New England Dressed Fresh Pork—and New England Dressed Fresh Pork is the finest, tenderest, freshest Pork you can buy in New England. Millions of dollars are invested in the modern plants preparing these choice Pork cuts under U. S. Government inspection—Fresh Pork that is Fresh in Fact as well as in Theory—cut not over 24 hours when it arrives in your dealer's store.

Iced Tea Delicious With Your Summer Meals

If you'd like to have your iced tea as fragrant and sparkling as the hot cup that cheers, choose the brand with care—you'll find some reliable ones displayed in our supply cabinet in the Martha Lee Cooking School—and keep in mind these few suggestions:

In making tea to be iced, allow twice as much dry tea for each cup as for a hot drink.

Make the tea exactly as if it were to be used hot. That is, scald the teapot and when thoroughly heated pour out the water. Then add the tea leaves and pour over it freshly boiling water in proportion of one cup of water to two teaspoons of tea (for iced tea). Let steep for five minutes and pour off for immediate serving.

Fill glasses full of coarsely cracked ice of one-third of chipped or shaved ice. Pour the tea on the ice, taking care not to touch the glass with the hot tea for fear of cracking.

Freshly-brewed, well-made tea poured over ice is not at all the same beverage that is made very strong and cooled and weakened with water and finally served with a piece of ice to tinkle. The first kind is clear, with a delicate flavor and taste, while the second is cloudy with a bitter, peppery taste no matter how much it is weakened or sweetened.

Powdered sugar is better to serve with iced tea than granulated, since the powdered sugar dissolves in cold liquids easily. Either the juice or sections of lemon or orange are served with iced tea. The juice, which I personally prefer, is served in a small pitcher or bowl with a little cream ladle, and a simple sugar syrup is often used in place of sugar. This simple syrup is handy, too, to keep on hand in your refrigerator during the summer months for quick lemonade or other drinks. To make it put one cup of granulated sugar and one-half cup of water in a smooth saucepan. Bring it to a boil, cover and boil five minutes. One tablespoon of this thick, concentrated syrup will be enough to sweeten a glass of tea for the average taste.

Iced tea makes a flavorful foundation for many summer punches to be served for porch parties or when just plain iced tea is considered quite festive enough. Perhaps you would like some of these for the scrap book I hope you are making from clippings from this column.

For Juicy Pies

To keep juice from coming out of pies, wet the lower crust with the white of an egg. Let dry. Then fill. Pinch upper crust firmly around the edges.

20 Years for Ham

Atlanta, June 13—Theft of a ham coat Oscar Jossie, colored, 20 years on the chain gang yesterday. That sentence was imposed on him by Judge John Hutcheson in Dekalb County Superior Court.

Ex-Cops Deny Theft from Sleeping Barber

Charged with the larceny of implements valued at $300 from the barber shop of John Maile in Baldwin st., Lynn, John J. Toomey and James Shannahan, former Lynn policemen, were arraigned in Lynn court today while police sought a third man.

According to the complaint, Maile was asleep in one of his chairs when three men softly entered, and gathered up a massage machine, electric blower, a dozen bottles of toilet water, four pairs of clippers, six razors and four pairs of shears.

A woman neighbor gave information resulting in the arrests. The men pleaded not guilty and were held in $500 until June 16.

TRIED ALL KINDS OF LAXATIVES

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Gave Only Permanent Relief

As everybody knows, the market is flooded with cathartics, pills and patent compounds for the relief of constipation. At best, whatever results are obtained are temporary. Besides, there is the danger in certain habit-forming drugs.

Mr. P. M. Fisher, 517 Olive Street, Scranton, Pa., has something to say on this subject which will be interesting to all constipation sufferers. He says:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and used, for relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days treatment I would only find my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Regularly, once a day as directed. Since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the desired result, and it leaves me in a very healthful condition."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is positively guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or money refunded.

In addition, it adds needed iron to the diet. You will like its delicious flavor. There are many delightful ways to eat it. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ex-Albanian Premier Will Return to Hub

Tirana, Albania, June 13—Bishop Fan Noli, former premier of Albania, announced today he would return to Boston to resume ecclesiastical work. Bishop Fan Noli founded the Christian Albanian church in Boston in 1908, and received an A. B. degree from Harvard in 1912. He was premier of Albania in the latter part of 1924, having overthrown Zogu, but later was himself overthrown and went into exile.

Gelatin Helps Artistic Cook Many Times

Gelatin has two fold virtue. It is easy and economical to use and is responsible for much of the colorful beauty of salads and deserts. A simple dessert, made with clear fruit gelatin in attractive colors schemes will dress up the coolest luncheon. And when we wish to spread ourselves for the bridge "crowd," gelatin leaps to the fore with innumerable devices for brightening up the menu.

If you are at your wit's end for salad variations, try molding them in gelatin and serving on crisp lettuce leaves. Plain gelatin is used, and the process is thusly:

PLAIN GELATIN FOR SALADS

1 envelope gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 cup hot water
½ cup sugar
¼ cup vinegar

Soak the gelatin in the cold water in a pint measure five minutes. Add the hot water and sugar and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add the vinegar and fill measure up with water. This is a basic jelly in which all kinds of vegetables or fruits can be arranged to make a variety of attractive salads.

1 box prepared coffee jelly
1¾ cups boiling water
Cream
1 cup thinly sliced, fresh peaches
Additional peach slices.

Dissolve the jelly in the boiling water. Place several slices of peach into a cold, wet mold, and pour over them three or four tbsps of coffee jelly. Set in refrigerator or bowl of chopped ice to chill. When set add another layer each of sliced peaches and jelly and allow to set. Continue until jelly and peaches are all used. Unmold and serve with whipped cream. Serves six.

GUY W. CURRIER SERIOUSLY ILL

Guy W. Currier, one of Boston's best-known lawyers, is seriously ill with heart trouble at his summer home in Peterboro, N. H., it became known today.

Currier went to Peterboro about a week ago at the advice of his physician, it was said last night. He suffered a personal loss in his summer residence. Soon after the loss he was stricken at the home of Cyrus Phipps, a leading local specialist, another Boston specialist, whose name could not be learned last night, and Dr. Charles A. Cutler of Peterboro, N. H., one of the best-known physicians in that section of New Hampshire.

Dr. Phipps remained at the Currier summer home last night but it was reported that he expected to return to Boston today.

Dr. Cutler said last night that while Currier was in a serious condition, he was somewhat better than he had been. The members of his family are with him and have been since he went to his New Hampshire home.

—it's different

WHY PAY THE SAME FOR LESSER QUALITY AND QUANTITY?

Puritan sells at about the same price as other well known malt brands. And—in the Puritan can you'll find a tenth more malt than most competing brands offer.

Many people think "malt is malt," If you've that idea, it's high time you tried Puritan.

Two things make malt quality: Materials—and manufacture.

The best materials are none too good for Puritan buyers.

And—the expensive but certain "Controlled-Temperature Process" guards Puritan every second during the making.

NEWS OF THE PORT OF BOSTON

By CARL MORRISON

"You can go on the radio at 7 p. m. and talk until you are blue in the face!"

That's what the manager of the American's WHDH radio station said, when the writer asked for time for another harbor broadcast for next Monday night.

All humor aside, the ship news editor knows better than to talk for half an hour, on the radio or anywhere else. The program next Monday will be full of peppy features, all brief.

"Get any good singing?" inquired the manager.

We then told him about Miss Anna G. Feely of Orient Heights, secretary to the traffic manager of the U. S. Shipping Board. Miss Feely is a soprano and pianist who has performed at every radio station in Boston.

"She has also accompanied some of the leading Hub tenors, and does a great deal of playing in Boston musical circles," we added.

The manager asked if we had arranged for any of the longshoremen to go on the air.

"What's the title?" asked the manger.

We told him it is called, "Down in Number Three," and is sung to the tune of "Back Home in Tennessee."

Three more well known harbor workers will do their stuff. John Hanlon, known as the "hustler's son," and his partner, Melvin Melanson, will give a ukulele concert. Helping them with vocal effects will be Harold Green, "the singing longshoreman."

Green is noted for his singing during political campaigns. Johnny Hanlon learned to play his 10-string uke while serving a hitch in the navy at gay Honolulu. He is often called the Earl Nelson of the harbor. Melanson is a former WEEI star.

Diary of Modern Mariner

"Someone pointed out to me George O'Shrie, marine superintendent of Rogers & Webb. He is famous for his even disposition which is never upset. He has a husky son, who once challenged the father to a boxing bout, but soon regretted his challenge."

Sea Chronicle

Seamen signing up for cruises yesterday included William J. Delaney of Dorchester, headed for Virginia, and Hayward E. Bliss of Wakefield, who sails for South America.

Our daily sea advice to landlubbers is:

"You will want to carry the key to the bowsprit fore and aft each day. If the key is a large one, ask for a small hand truck. Medium sized bowsprit keys can be carried on the shoulders much like a railroad tie, and weigh about the same."

Today's safety rule reads:

Where the derrick post is low it is important, to avoid topping the boom too high, as it will put undue strain on the boom and topping lift.

Today's Who's Who

Robert F. Luce, commander of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey for this district, is the subject of today's harbor sketch. He is in the limelight due to the government plans to re-survey Georges Banks which were reported by fishermen to be shifting, possibly as a result of recent earthquakes.

Robert F. Luce
Bachrach photo

Commander Luce, who is a famous man and a graduate of M. I. T. and Harvard, has been in the survey forces for a quarter of a century. He has won distinction by inaugurating some noteworthy systems. He started in 1914 the precise dead reckoning plan for measuring drifts and currents. In 1923, he was in charge of perfecting of radio acoustic ranging methods of obtaining position finding. This was the biggest development in offshore surveying in recent years.

Possessing a long string of engineering honors, Commander Luce keeps human by being a "movie fan." He also instructs navigation classes at the Boston Yacht Club. He is also a globe-trotter extraordinary, having served in all sections of the U. S. A. and its possessions.

Daily Suggestion

Today's daily suggestion comes from Joseph P. Smiddy, one of the I. L. A. officials, who says:

"This recent disaster ought to cause the authorities to take certain precautions about such cargoes. Ships with highly inflammable goods like that oil tanker, should not be allowed to depart from port during foggy weather. If on the high seas, such boats should be required to report their position every hour or oftener, so that passenger liners and big freighters may keep well away from their courses."

Miscellaneous

We have learned that Capt. Joseph Ryan's noted Morita is to be towed out beyond the Boston Lightship, early next week, and sunk. She will be soaked with gasoline and allowed to have a blazing entrance to Davy Jones Locker. This will be in 120 feet of water, which is plenty deep enough for this 12 year-old Oregon freighter of 2000 tons.

The International Longshoremen's Union office today announced that an important system of cooperation had been adopted between the I. L. A. and the Moore-Mack lines. Until last week, non-union labor has been employed, but an understanding has been reached with the union. Consequently, unloading has been greatly speeded up due to the unrestricted sling load adopted by the union last week. The steamship line is one of the biggest freight handlers serving Boston, both coastwise and foreign. This new agreement will give work to about 100 union men at each ship arrival at Pier 40, Hoosic docks.

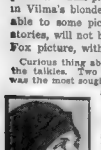
VILMA BANKY TO BE STARRED WITH WARNER BAXTER IN "RENEGADE"

FOX ASSIGNS FLEMING TO DIRECT OLD FAVORITE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc

LOS ANGELES, June 13—Domesticity, pots and kettles, et cetera notwithstanding, Vilma Banky is making one more picture. Thus piece of news will please many fans who delight in Vilma's blonde beauty. Her quaint Hungarian accent, suitable to some pictures but entirely out of place in American stories, will not be amiss in "Renegade," Warner Baxter's next Fox picture, with Victor Fleming directing.

Curious thing about Vilma and the talkies. Two years ago she was the most sought after screen actress out here. Her beauty and her pantomimic ability furnished Sam Goldwyn with hundreds of offers to borrow her. She is under contract to Sam.



Louella Parsons

Then came the sound pictures and Vilma, who cannot speak without an accent, was cut in the cold, cold world. American girls who had formerly looked at Vilma with envy now changed to pity for her plight. Vilma decided she had had enough of the movies, so she would remain at home and cook Hungarian goulash for Rob La Rocque.

WE JUST HATE to brag but we spoke the truth and nothing but the truth when we stated that Douglas Fairbanks would in all probability co-star with Bebe Daniels in "Reaching for the Moon," Irving Berlin's first United Artists picture. Great doings on this picture. John W. Considine, Jr., who has been general manager of United Artists, will direct the pictorial scenes with William Anthony McGuire directing the dialogue. They tell me that the part for Douglas Fairbanks was just born for him.

* * *

WHAT A TITLE this would be, "From Evangeline to Movie Star." Yet it expresses perfectly what has happened to George Houston who started life singing hymns and finished playing leads in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Laurence Tibbett brought Mr. Houston to the attention of M. G. M. after he had played the lead in "New Moon" on the stage for a season. Hearing him sing the powers that be at M. G. M. realized he was just the salt in their porridge and presto change, he was put on a contract. I cannot say as to what will be his first picture.

* * *

JACK HOLT has just signed a new contract with Columbia. A five-year contract, and why shouldn't he sign one when Columbia has done so well by him and he has done so well by them. Looks like a good arrangement. Universal plans making a talking version of "The Cat and the Canary." Remember that number which the late Paul Leni directed? It was great on the stage and it was great in the silent version, and it ought to be still greater in the talkies. Lucien Littlefield's address for the time being is at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. He will be in the Harry Pollard picture, Jack Gilbert and company have gone away on a two weeks' location trip. Jack has denied himself to all visitors, stating that he wants to make good in a talkie before giving vent to any bursts of oratory.

CAPT ROSCOE TURNER, Art Goebel, and even Col. Lindbergh, can look to their laurels. Clarence Brown is pretty apt to win honors from all of them. New York paged the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offices here for a fresh print of "Romance." Clarence took out his little old airplane and all by his lonesome flew to New York in 22 hours, actual flying time, with the print. He planned to zigzag back in the plane, stopping en route at the various points, but the weather man gave him such an unfriendly report that he reckoned it would not do to start much under a week. Returning to this, Clarence took the weather into consideration and decided not to waste any time, so he mailed for Europe night before last, and after spending three weeks in gay Paree will return to New York, flying back home.

WHEN MACK SENNETT says a girl is good in the movies, we listen. Mack ought to know after all the years of experience as a film producer. He now goes into the most expensive superlatives over Marie (Babe) Dane, who, he believes, has great possibilities as a screen comedienne. Miss Dane is the baby talk girl, will have the lead in "Grandma's Girl." Florence Roberts plays Grandma, and the two heavy romances are Nick Stuart and Anty Clive. Wonder if the story is anything like Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy"?

A PECULIAR FREAK of fate brings Clarence Moorehouse into the limelight and in a way adds fame to a man heretofore unknown. Moorehouse is the gorilla now "he played" the part of the gorillas in "Ingagi." He has been playing parts of this kind in Hollywood for a long time without anyone paying much attention. When "Ingagi" was produced he was engaged to play the part of the gorilla that stole women and took them to his lair. I doubt very much if the men back of this picture had any idea it would be such a tremendous success. It coined thousands of dollars until Will Hays demanded that it be recalled. Mr. Hays, speaking for the film producers, felt an admitted fake was bad for the film industry.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: June Collyer proving an adept at eating hot tamales at the Wichershams' party in Sonora town. Marceline Day and Mr. and Mrs. Finis Fox among the other film people at the party given in honor of James Bellah, a newcomer to Hollywood. William Kent saying au revoir to Hollywood friends. Bebe Daniels opening all of her wedding presents herself, Julia Faye entertaining a party of friends at the Cyprus Lore tea room and having their fortunes told. Minnie Flynn, high priestess of this cozy corner also reading the cards for Monte Blue, Bobbi Rosing, Eleanor Fair and other film celebrities. Louise Fazenda trying to be happy at going on location to Yuma, Ariz., in August. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

JAIL BREAKS STUDIED

Strange escapes from prison were gone over in police records and history to determine the modus operandi of a prison escape in "The Big House," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of penitentiary revolt which will open June 30 at Loew's State, it was disclosed by Wallace Beery, who has the part of Butch, a hardened criminal.

Wallace Beery

"No less than 18 escapes were investigated in detail from the records," stated Beery. "George Hill, the director; Frances Marion, author; Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery and I held a two-days' conference, each voting on his favorite method to determine how Chester was to break jail.

"We found some amazingly ingenious escapes. There was a case in New York in which a man got into a hollow steel girder of a bridge in process of construction and crawled away through it.

"In another case a prisoner who was a trusty donned the overcoat and hat of a member of the prison board which was in session in the prison and walked out. He was recaptured. Several convicts have escaped in loads of garbage in prison vans. One managed to steal the clothes of a workman on a new building and went out with the contractor's force."

"I don't think I ever saw such elaborate research on any picture as on this one," Beery said. "A perfect replica of a prison was reconstructed and every step was supervised by former prison officials."

Stage Who's Who

Etha Black

Etha Black, who portrays one of the seven spinsters in "Broken Dishes" at the Wilbur, started her stage work by entertaining the soldiers during the war. She later emerged into stock, and it was during her apprenticeship in this that she became acquainted with Boston and the vicinity—having appeared in Brockton, Lowell and Wollaston. Interspersed with her engagements in stock, which included playing the leads for such favorites as Vaughn Glaser and Henry Duffy, was the beginning of her radio start. There's nothing unusual about this, as the studied in London at the London Conservatory of Music and was later a church soloist in Montreal.

IRENE RICH IN ROGERS' FILM

Irene Rich's idea of "having the time of her life" is playing in pictures with Will Rogers.

In his first starring production for Fox Films, "They Had to See Paris," Rogers would have no screen wife other than Miss Rich. In "So This Is London," at the new B. F. Keith's tomorrow, he again appears as Miss Rich's husband.

"Will is the greatest, kindest and most lovable screen husband I have ever had," declares Miss Rich and she has had many during her long and successful career on the screen.

"Working with Will seems more like a gay holiday than work. The net result is every one is in good spirits and when that situation exists there can be nothing but good results."

Although Miss Rich did not say it, the fact remains that Rogers and Miss Rich spent much time discussing the proper care and feeding of children, Miss Rich having two girls and the Oklahoma philosopher three, children, two boys and a girl, all far beyond the teething stage.

IT'S A CASE OF ROGERS & Rogers at the Metropolitan this week. On the screen one sees "Buddy" of that name; on stage, Will Rogers, great and only. Will The latter may well be called the Greatest One-Man Show on Earth, and we herewith add our dub lick, lacking only the ceremonial of the accolade to make him the Sir Knight among the monologue men. The Rogers family will always be famous so long as the inimitable Will lives to tell it to the world. He has a wit and a way that are all his own. That intriguing personality of his has claws more "catchy" than the tentacles of an octopus. This highest paid of all individuals to appear at this theater deserves all he gets; we sat in at a crowded house that accepted him an ovation and in return received abundant flow from Will's fountain of fun.

Will Rogers

For film fare there is offered as the feature, "Safety in Numbers," starring "Buddy" Rogers. It is rather pale stuff as to plot and acting, but it has snappy lines, and some good comedy as well. This latter is contributed chiefly by Roscoe Kerns as the chauffeur. The young Mr. Rogers, admittedly possessing an appeal for the women, breaks forth into much song, and often shines as a matinee idol should. Toward the close he rough-and-tumbles it in manner fit to win rapper admiration for his bicipital prowess. Kathryn Crawford does well in her sweetheart role. Louise Jeavers, as the housemaid, is even better. Also in the cast may be seen Josephine Dunn, Carol Lombard, and Geneva Mitchell, the last not having much to do but betraying much ability in doing that little. There are two splendid newsreels on the program.

* * *

Will Rogers more than makes up for any shortcomings on the part of Young to whom he graciously surrenders the honors in son in the film you have just seen." No subject seems to be safe from Will's thrusts; nothing from Noah to these days of the bootleg deluge. He hits 'em here and there, always getting the laughs, yet time and again putting across truths which many else we know could put just as tersely and wittily as he. Witness, as examples, these from the recent Naval Conference.

"America is a nation that never loses a battle and never won a conference.

"By the naval pact, for every battleship that Great Britain and Japan will build, America will sink one.

"I met the Japanese Admiral just before I left London. I was glad to meet him. I told him I was glad to shake his hand. 'I have been messing around this conference,' I told him, 'and now I'm mighty glad to shake the hand of—the winner!'"

* * *

Back stage, Will was just as plain in appearance and brilliant in wit, as he had been before the footlights upstairs. He is nimble of brain, leg and voice. He just has to be seen and heard to be appreciated. Don't miss him.

Griffith's Living Expenses Are High

D. W. Griffith, the "old master" of the movies, remains in this day a genuine southern gentleman. In order to remain one in the fullest sense of the word, it costs him a cool million dollars a year. He lives in a suite at the Ambassador Hotel, paying many times as much rent as the finest Beverly Hills home could fetch. He throws 10 and 20 dollar bills around to waiters and doormen as if it annoyed him to have the things in his pocket.

REVERE BEACH PAGEANT IS TONIGHT

One of the most elaborate spectacles ever presented at Revere Beach is scheduled for tonight when 10 000 marchers, 40 floats and 25 bands will parade along the beach front in colorful array. The boulevard has been gaily decorated for the occasion and special arrangements for handling the large crowds have been made.

The parade will climax the Tercentenary celebration which has been going on all week. There will be soldiers, sailors and marines, groups of school children in costume and gaily decorated floats depicting various scenes of historical and educational interest.

The participants will assemble at 6 45 o'clock on Shirley ave., adjacent to the beach and the parade will start promptly at 7 30. Peter F. Conley will be chief marshal.

Install Earphones In Legitimate Theater

Use of earphones for the hard of hearing, brought into wide use since the coming of talking pictures, will be demonstrated for a legitimate theater on June 16 at the Avon, New York, in connection with the convention for the hard of hearing. The New York League for the Hard of Hearing is arranging to equip 20 seats with Western Electric Audiophone, the same apparatus now being used in about 50 theaters throughout the country.

OCEAN HOP SET FOR SATURDAY

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 13—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, who has been planning a transatlantic flight to New York, was again in an optimistic mood today over the weather prospects and expressed the hope that later forecasts would justify taking off tomorrow morning.

The crew of the Southern Cross spent the morning going over the plane, which is in fine condition. Free State air force planes will escort the Southern Cross to the west coast line at Galway and a powerful new radio station is being hurriedly completed at Baldonnel so that it may pick up messages from the transatlantic plane.

Hub Boy, 16, Missing

William Potter, 16, has been missing from his Winthrop st. Charlestown, home since Monday when he disappeared, saying he wanted to go to sea.

2 BOYS HELD IN AUTO THEFT

Two 14-year-old Lynn boys, said by police to be wanted in Waltham as hit-and-run drivers, were arraigned in Lynn today charged with larceny of an automobile owned by Richard Schmoyer of 11 Beach rd., that city.

The car of Schmoyer, physical director of the Lynn schools, was stolen Tuesday at the same time that John Weeden of Colonial ave., and Robert Johnson of Conomo ave., were reported missing.

That night the car struck a girl in Waltham and the occupants fled, after the machine had crashed into a fence.

Last night Patrolman Carter of Lynn arrested Johnson as he got off a Narrow Gauge train and Weeden was taken into custody in Neenah, N. H., for larceny of $3 from a filling station.

Both boys pleaded guilty to larceny of the automobile and were held in $500 for appearance in juvenile court Wednesday.

OLD POWDER HOUSE—SOMERVILLE

One of the really ancient and unique objects to be viewed within easy reach of Boston, is the Old Powder House, off the old stage road to Keene, N. H., now a broad thoroughfare through Somerville.

When it was first built, the powder house stood at the crossroads from Cambridge, Charlestown and Arlington, a splendid location to serve the country about it.

Its walls are slightly bulging now, yet its masonry is solid. The region around the base of Quarry Hill on the summit of which it stands, was known as the Stinted Pasture, and a little creek nearby was called Two Penny Brook. The Powder House was built as a mill probably during the time of Queen Anne in 1703-4 by John Mallet. It passed down the generations of Mallets to Michael, who conveyed it to the Colony in 1747.

It was no longer a windmill then, but had been used for a considerable period as a powder house.

As a powder house, it has historical value, for during the Revolution, the American army used the structure as storage for ammunition. General Gage reused an expedition to be sent to the hill and 250 half-barrels of powder were seized. The news of the act spread rapidly so that on the following morning a great gathering of armed patriots formed on the Cambridge Common.

This was in September, 1774, and was the first armed representation against the king. The revolution had really begun, although bloodshed did not occur until the following spring, at Lexington.

The Powder House then became the magazine of the Continental army besieging Boston.

A legend has grown up about the Powder House when it was in use as a mill in Farmer Mallett's regime. About twilight one November day a youth rode to the door. Mallet bade the youngster to enter and partake of the food.

He was wrapped in a long cloak and seemed ill-at-ease, not eating at all, but seeking the corner farthest from the bright glow of the fire place. "Early to bed and early to rise" was the good farmer's motto, so leading the way, he escorted the boy to the garret, where slept also his son, Andre. The youth, not satisfied, asked for a room to himself, whereat Mallet became indignant and said that if he could not sleep with a miller's son, he should sleep with the rats in the old mill, for no other place remained to offer. The youth eagerly grasped at the proposal, and the farmer finally led him to the dark structure.

Not long, however, before voices were heard. The farmer's wife was one, and then there was another voice. The youth drew the ladder up into the loft, and went farther up into the top of the structure. Another ladder was brought and the farmer's companion, threatening furiously, began to ascend, calling upon the youth, who was really a girl disguised as a boy, to come down.

Finding she could no longer evade pursuit, the girl tried to reach the ladder and the man attempted to grasp her. In his eagerness, he lost his footing and fell head first down the opening. His hand grasped something in his fall. It was the rope which set the old mill in motion.

When the mill was stopped, the man was found crushed in the machinery. The girl, brought from the conquest of Acadia, had been placed in the home of the man, whose attentions had become so unwelcome that she had fled.

Tomorrow: Old Town Hall, Marblehead.

Youthful "Reds" Fined at Waltham

Lawrence B. Cohen, Jr., and Howard Weisberg, both 21 and living on Lynde st., Boston, were each fined $10 by Judge Michael J. Connolly in Waltham court for distributing Communist handbills at the gate of the Hood Rubber Co., Watertown, without a permit. They appealed.

Cohen refused to take the oath and was permitted to make an affirmation without being sworn. He claimed no permit was required as the handbills were of a political nature, containing an appeal to workers.

STEPDAUGHTERS of WAR ... by HELEN ZENNA SMITH

Tosh Gives Advice to B. F. on Favorite Topic—"Doing Her Bit"

"FOR," said B. F., "surely you can do your bit just as patriotically in an amusing place where there are amusing officers."

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Helen Smith, known as "Smithy," is a member of the English women's war ambulance corps in France. Her first convoy duty was a nightmare, and if it had not been for Tosh, a fellow-worker, she would have collapsed. She returned to a hardly eatable meal, half dead with fatigue and shaken to nerves. Tosh, the niece of an earl, is the roughest, most lovable girl in the unit. Only Tosh's shocking war vocabulary can adequately describe their pitiful situation. Their tyrannical commandant she has christened "Mrs. Heh." Smithy, Tosh, The B. F., Skinny, Etta Potato and The Bug share one room. A bath is out of the question, for there is only one pint of water among them.

CHAPTER 3

The B. F. is quite liked. She is fearfully "refeened and neece" but we forgive her that, she is such a harmless sap. Her definition of a true lady is one who is ignorant of the simplest domestic details to the point of imbecility. She insisted on helplessly inquiring the first day she came however one knew when water had reached boiling point. The servants at home had always boiled the family water, she said. She was very shocked at Tosh's corse comment on this form of economy in the home.

The B. F. is like a Harrison Fisher girl on a magazine cover, and is frankly disappointed with the war. The War Office has not quite played the game sending her here. She had an idea being out in France was a kind of perpetual picnic minus the restrictions of home life. She saw herself the cynosure of innumerable admiring male eyes.

Seems Waste
Of Good Uniform

It seems such a waste of a well-cut uniform to be in a place where the men are too wounded or too harassed to regard women other than as cogs in the great machinery, and the women are too worn-out to care whether they do or not. She intends to transfer to the base at the earliest opportunity.

"For," she said the other day, "surely you can do your bit just as patriotically in an amusing place where there are amusing officers!"

(The B. F. is very fond of talking about "doing her bit." She would go down horribly well with my parents.)

Tosh gravely advised her not to bewrde "doing her bit" with the amusing officers, in case she was not so amused in the end.

The B. F. is pity and soft and rather plump. She was comically like a ruffled doll as she drew herself up.

See the Point
All Except B. F.

"I can see by your face, Tosh, you're being obscene, but I do not see the point."

"Oh, you'll see that if you overdo 'doing your bit,'" laughed Tosh. "Won't she, girls?"

"Do you know what she means?" inquired the B. F. piteously.

We did.

A few weeks ago we should not have known.

B. F. Shocked
No Trousers in Heaven

The Bovril is good. We want more, but there is none. Tosh empties the chamber of charred paper out of the window, letting in a blast of icy air. The wind is rising, moaning round the convoy like a thousand angry witches. We shiver. Is it going to snow again? It may grow warmer if it snows. It can't grow any colder. It has been freezing hard for days. We break the ice in the water jug in the mornings and waken with our hot water bott'es frozen to a solid lump. We snuggle deeper into our flea-bags and tell one another we really must get up The Bug wants to change her underclothing and Etta Potato wants to wash to the waist to save doing it in the morning. She looks intensely relieved when informed the water jug is nearly empty, that there is just enough water for a hasty sponge of the face and hands. Her "big wash" must wait, indefinitely, until she plucks up courage to carry the hot water from the outhouse across the open yard, through the snow, into the bedroom. The Bug decides after all not to change into fresh underwear, her old ones are warm and there is no sense in changing unto clean, cold things until she washes her body thoroughly. We all agree. The Bug is grateful for our approval. She will show her gratitude in the usual manner, by pointing out the danger of bathing on some cold night

REVERE KIN FOUND IN WASHINGTON

New Firecrackers Are Banned

2 TYPES FROM CHINA FOUND DANGEROUS

Explosives Within Legal Size, but Are More Powerful Than Black Powder

The sale and distribution of two types of firecrackers containing an explosive of much greater power than firecrackers of the same size containing black gunpowder only" was prohibited today by State Fire Marshal John W Reth.

One type banned bears a label on the package stating that the fire crackers were manufactured in China, with the caution, "Do not hold in hand after lighting." The length of the firecracker is two inches, the diameter ⅝ inches, weight of explosive 3.7 grains and the composition was given as aluminum lust, possasium nitrate and sulphur.

The other, the marshal said, bears a Chinese inscription on the label, also the words "National Fire Works" and "Caution, do not hold in hand after lighting" in English The length of this fire cracker is 1¾ inches, diameter ¼ inch, weight of explosion charge, three grains. Composition is aluminum dust, potassium nitrate, charcoal and sulphur.

Although the firecrackers comply with the regulations of the department as to dimensions, their sale is in violation of the fireworks rules and regulations in that they contain an explosive of much greater power than firecrackers of the same size containing black powder only, the marshal declared.

WALTHAM BANK MAN GUILTY

Earl F. Caswell, former treasurer of the Waltham Co-operative Bank in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court today pleaded guilty to larceny of funds of the bank totalling $23,000.

Judge James H. Sisk was informed that Caswell had made full restitution and placed him on probation.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Warren L. Bishop told the court Caswell's defalcations were made possible through depositors doing business with him personally.

May Name School Head

At the meeting of the school committee of Medford next Monday night it is probable that a new superintendent will be elected, succeeding Herbert R. Howes, resigned.

IN SECLUSION WITH FAMILY FOR EIGHT YEARS

Descendant of Patriot Sends Her Congratulations on Tercentenary

After eight years of seclusion, Mrs. Pauline Revere Auerhamer, great-great-granddaughter of Paul Revere, emerged to offer congratulations on the day of Revere at the Tercentenary banquet.

The final indoor function of Revere's tercentenary celebration, a banquet under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce and the tercentenary committee, attracted 500 persons to City Hall last night

FOUND IN CAPITAL

Mrs Auerhamer was found living in Washington, D C with her husband and two children, after dropping quietly out of the public eye following her marriage to William Auerhamer, eight years ago. Even that event was perceived unheralded.

"It is with much pleasure that I recall a previous June when the township of Revere became the city of Revere, and I, as its great-great-granddaughter of Paul Revere, had at that time the distinct privilege and honor of participating in that dedication," wrote Mrs Auerhamer from her home on Floyd st Washington

"Through the kindness of one of your esteemed congressmen, Charles F. Underhill, I wish to offer you one and all my sincere congratulations on the most successful tercentenary celebration. Although I am not in your State at present, I am at all times interested in the doings of your city.

"May your city ever grow with the same steadfast ideals of the illustrious patriot for whom the city was named."

HUNG LANTERNS

The letter was read at the banquet last night by Mayor Andrew A. Casassa.

This is the first public statement from Mrs. Auerhamer since she last appeared in 1922 to hang the lanterns in the Old North Church tower at Boston's annual Patriots' Day celebration.

Consternation overwhelmed the Revere tercentenary committee members when they descended in vain her to the tercentenary banquet and were unable to find any trace of her.

Mrs. Auerhamer was finally discovered in Washington through her aunt, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Boston.

HOOPER SPEAKER

Cong Joseph L. Hooper, of Michigan, substituting for Cong Charles L. Underhill, who has been ill, was the principal speaker at the banquet last night.

Judge Samuel R. Cutler, of the Chelsea District Court, was toastmaster Other speakers were Lieut. Gov. William S. Youngman, Senator Conde B Brodhurst, Rev. Ernest Rowsl, of St. Anthony's Church, Mayor Casassa, former Mayor Alfred S Hall, Franklin P. Morse, and Rev Dr Nelson S Burbank, pastor of the First Baptist Church

It's Not Your Lucky Day—Not Today

No matter how you slice it, this is Friday-the-13th.

Today the bogey man, or the jinx, or the tri-headed hermaphrodite (look that one up), lurking in the dark corners of superstition, lunges out to grab the unwary and inflict upon him the penalty of disbelief, or so we are told.

History shows us that of all the Fridays-the-13th (or should it be Friday-the-13-ths?) were picked and to end they would materially increase haddock consumption—and not much else.

SOME REASONS WHY

Of course, if you walk under a ladder any day in the week you may be crowned with a can of paint, or if you shatter a mirror you may cut your finger, and the bureau of vital statistics at Washington, D C., has conducted an adding machine review that tends to disprove the claim that these accidents occur with higher frequency (radio note) on this day than any other.

Origin of the Friday-the-13th superstition is a moot point in history. In case you are not minded to look it up, Steinart's "Delvings Into the History of Unconventional Sequences," 1779-1802, Bradbury and MacMilligen, states emphatically that it was upon a Friday-the-13th that man first took his spouse and male to witness a baseball contest and was so pestered and barraged with questions of nonsense that henceforth the day and date were regarded as omen of ill fortune.

OR THEREABOUTS

In absolute contradiction of that explanation is Sadrid's "The How and Why of Bloody Pudding," an obscure work published first in London in the 17th century and in Chicago in the 20th century. Sadrid ascribed the jinx horror as having its conception on the day mankind first indulged in mixed drinks.

Other explanations are quite as silly as this story and the superstition itself.

(Ed. note The above are wrong Friday the 13th was born an unlucky day when rewrite men first had to think up reasons why Friday-the-13th should be an unlucky day and type them for public consumption.)

Harvard Students Wreck Annex Piazza

As a farewell gesture before vacation, a group of Harvard students are said to have wrecked the piazza of Russell Hall annex on Row st, Cambridge in the "Gold Coast" section last night

The annex will be razed during the summer to make way for a new building, and it is understood some of the students decided to hasten matters.

Three pillars and two balustrades were torn down, chopped up and the wreckage was strewn about the yard.

LOS ANGELES SPURTS TO FOURTH

Detroit Likely to Lose Honor; Hub Count Past Understanding; "Suburbanitis" Blamed

Boston has evidently slipped from seventh to ninth position in the national ranking of city population.

Her total of 775,574 on the basis of complete returns in the 1930 federal census will probably reach 780,000 on a recheck, supervisors announce, but that total will not be enough to allow the Old Dame to overtake Los Angeles and Baltimore, which have passed her in growth since 1920.

There is a vague, but very vague possibility that a recount will show her ahead of Baltimore, which reports 789,921.

The position of the first three cities, New York, Chicago and Philadelphia remains unchanged although only Chicago has reported its 1930 total.

LOS ANGELES' SPURT.

For fourth position, Los Angeles moving up from tenth position on an estimated total of 1,200,000 is making a strong bid against the 1920 holder, Detroit, which has not yet reported.

Either Los Angeles or Detroit it appears, will outrank Cleveland for fifth place, its position ten years ago. Cleveland reports 901,482 for 1930, which is below the 1920 Detroit total, and should give her sixth position in the listing.

Boston's failure to attain the 800,000 mark, which would have given her eighth position, has brought a general demand for a recheck and the blank system for those overlooked, inaugurated by the Boston Evening American, has added hundreds of new names.

Yet the possibility of overcoming the deficit is admittedly remote and the tentative standing will no doubt remain unchanged.

HUB FIGURES UNEXPLAINABLE

Pittsburgh will probably follow Boston with 644,795, moving from ninth position down to 10th, with San Francisco, which passed Buffalo in the last decade, in 11th position, and Buffalo in 12th.

The 1930 Boston total shows a loss of 3,891 from the 1925 State census figures—and it is a loss inhabitants will find difficult to reconcile with their own opinions, especially in view of the gain of 27,469 over the federal census of 1920.

The only other large city to make a gain anywhere near as small in 10 years is St. Louis, 30,000 being given as the cause in both instances.

Boston, with its great metropolitan area of fine residential sections, is reaching out for—but has so far failed to encompass—the surrounding, heavily populated cities and towns. This, also, is true in St. Louis. The highest ranking cities have annexed district after district.

1—N. Y. (incomplete)	1	8,628,648
2—Chicago	2	3,373,733	2	2,701,705
3—Phila. (incomplete)	3	1,953,779
4—Los Ang.	1,200,000*	10	576,673
5—Detroit (incomplete)	4	993,673

MISS MILDRED THELEN of Lyan did interpretive dancing that brought grounds of applause.

B. U. HAS THREE CLASS DAYS

Senior Week activities at Boston University were drawn near to a close yesterday, when seniors of three colleges held class day exercises.

"Go West, young men, go West," was a bit of the advice given in the medical school address by Dr. Mendenhall of the school faculty at the Evans Memorial. And he urged that the rural parts are the places to start in the profession, and that doctors are needed in the West.

Miss Rena Keay of Jamaica Plain, president of the graduating class, opened the exercises with an address of welcome. Miss Aurora A. Williams of Fall River, a student, then favored with several vocal solos. Then there was the "Wonderland."

The main feature of the class day exercises of the college of liberal arts, held at Nickerson Field, Weston, was the announcement of the student "moats." Miss Rosamond Harmon of Lawrence, the class valedictorian, was chosen the "most popular, most all around," and the girl most popular with the opposite sex.

More than half a hundred members of B. U. class of 1900 will gather tomorrow noon at the roof garden of Hotel Westminster for their annual reunion and later attend alumni day exercises at Nickerson field, Weston.

Miss Grace W. Meade of Woburn, general chairman, has arranged the program of speakers for the occasion, which will [illegible] Dean Everett W. Lord of the college of business administration will be toastmaster.

Preliminaries in the regatta of Boston Junior Model Yacht Association, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Community Service of Boston, Inc. will be held tomorrow in the Frog Pond, Boston Common.

Scores of the miniature yachts are ready to meet the test which will qualify them for entry in the finals to be held on Charles river [illegible] Saturday.

The events will be run in two classes, one for entrants under 17 years, on R. S. L. 1930, and another between 17 and 21 years on R. S. L. 1930.

For [illegible] age competition [illegible] under 15 inches between 15 and 18 inches and between 18 and 30 inches.

The course for [illegible] is a triangular area. An agreement on control [illegible] measurements will be from stem to stern of the hull not including the bowsprit. Awards will be for first, second and third places.

No limit is placed on the number of boats that may be entered by a contestant but no models must have been made and must be handled by the entrant.

Three trials will be allowed in each outlet. The total number of points scored in these trials decides the qualifying position of the contestant in the finals.

The officials of the trial runs will be Fred Pigeon, of the National Model Yacht Club of America, and Francis X. McLaughlin and Gunnar Munnick, of the Boston Junior Model Yacht Association.

Twilight Service for Tercentenary

A twilight service to be held Sunday at Victory field, Watertown, will bring the tercentenary celebrat on of the town to a close. There will be a special musical program.

PEAR TREE 300 YEARS OLD

The oldest pear tree in America planted by Gov. Endecott, first governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630, bloomed this spring and is bearing perfect fruit.

This tree, standing in an enclosed lot on the old Endecott farm at Danvers, Mass. has borne fruit continuously for 300 years.

Last year the present owner of the farm on which the tree stands, George Endicott, picked two bushels of fine fruit from it.

The tree was a mass of blooms this spring and is now full of thrifty young pears. George Endecott is a lineal descendant of the Governor although the fourth letter of the name has been cancelled from a to i during the past 300 years.

In this garden also stood the first time piece in New England, the brass sundial by which villagers told time for many years.

REP. WASHBURN DEMANDS DRY LAW REPEAL

Declares Emphatically Against Federal 18th Amendment and "Baby Volstead" Act

Representative Slater Washburn, of Worcester, a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Fourth District, to succeed Congressman George R. Stobbs, who is retiring, came out flat-footedly today for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Baby Volstead act.

"Prohibition is a question of policy of government," Washburn's statement reads. "Federal constitutional prohibition is unfounded in principle. I am convinced that the question does not belong in the constitution or at Washington.

FOR STATE RULE

"It should be determined by Massachusetts for Massachusetts. I am against the growing centralization of government in Washington and the bureaucracy that goes with it.

"I believe the best government is the town meeting; it is closest to the people. I believe the state should govern itself, so far as it is possible, independent of federal jurisdiction. For these reasons I was against the child labor amendment when that issue confronted us.

"I favor the repeal of the Baby Volstead act and the Eighteenth Amendment.

TARIFF AND VETS

"I favor a tariff high enough to protect the business of the district and will work for legislation to insure the maximum of production with the minimum of unemployment. I will also work to see that the disabled veterans receive the care and attention to which they are entitled."

Police Headquarters Mistaken for Postoffice

That Lynn's police headquarters can be mistaken for a postoffice Capt. James F. Muckian, working diligently behind the cage at the signal desk, found out when he looked up to see a well dressed man standing at the opening in the cage with a letter in his hand.

"Two two-cent stamps so I can mail this, please," stated the man.

PRIEST SAVES HOST IN FIRE

After forcing open a rear door, Rev. Frederick F. Muldoon, a curate, raced through flames at St. Philip's Church, Harrison ave. and East Lenox st., South End, and carried vases containing the host to safety when fire swept the basement doing damage estimated at $5000.

Two alarms were sounded for the blaze and although fire and church officials believed the structure would be destroyed, firemen prevented damage to the church interior.

Two girls, Frances Bastenbury of 18 Flagg st. and Eva D. Blaso of 37 Flagg st., who were passing, noticed a glow in the windows of the Reed st. side of the church. They informed Henry McLaughlin of 824 Harrison ave. and he sounded an alarm. At the same time Fr. Muldoon, looking out a window, saw a glow in the basement.

He ran out of the rectory to the basement but found the door locked. He ripped the door open and raced through the flames to the tabernacle.

MODERN IDEAS OF WOMEN ASSAILED

Mgr. Haberlin Tells Emmanuel Grads to Stand by "Principles That Have Stood the Ages"

Rt. Rev. Richard J. Haberlin, D. D., vicar-general of the archdiocese of Boston, represented Cardinal O'Connell at commencement exercises of Emmanuel College, conferring honorary and academic degrees on 66 girls.

A scathing indictment of the so-called "modern woman" was given by the monsignor as he urged the graduates to avail themselves of "a set of principles that have stood the test of ages."

"Youth today is beset on all sides with many grievous and subtle dangers, the poisons of which doom the victim to a spiritual death," he declared.

"Voices crying in the wilderness presenting spiritual ideals and principles are looked on as prophets of weakness. Wealth, power and luxury are glorified and religion is estimated as the manifestation of ignorance or superstition.

THINKS FOR HERSELF

"A spirit of extravagance and mad whirl and turmoil of false values is abroad, sapping the foundations of Christian life. Entertainment, custom and costume are of paramount interest and work to debase and drag the world to degradation which follows corrupted public standards.

"The modern woman, we are told, thinks for herself today. She no longer follows blindly her male kin. She has a set of standards of her own. She is no more the mother of the household, for that is slavery and drudgery.

LAYS BLAME UPON STATE OFFICIALS

Social Workers' Conference Speakers Score 'Alien Laws,' Injustice to Women of 30

Flaying penal authorities for their indifference and lack of humanity in the treatment of prisoners and charging legislatures with being partly to blame for the overcrowded condition of prisons, George W. Kirchwey, head of the department of criminology of the New York School of Social Work, was a principal speaker at the National Conference of Social Workers today.

"It is not easy to say to what extent the principle of retribution, so deeply rooted in our human nature, is actually operative in our penal legislation and in judicial and prison practice today," said Dr. Kirchwey, who is a former warden of Sing Sing prison.

"I cannot help believing that it is still the dominant element in penal policy. Usually it operates below the level of consciousness, but it sometimes finds frank expression.

"Our prisons have recently spoken for themselves in no uncertain terms. The inhumanity, the careless indifference to the most elementary human rights to which they bear witness need no emphasis from words of mine.

ACTION IS NEEDED

"An ancient evil is neither condoned nor explained by dismissing it as an old story, particularly where that evil has grown persistently worse. The accelerating rate of overcrowding, the increasing idleness, the aggravated unrest—all call for explanation.

"Even the callous indifference which has permitted these evils to accumulate to a menacing degree is a fact which, in a community with our tradition of humanity and resourcefulness, demands explanation.

"The pendulum of time has swung forward from the 18th century to the 20th, but the pendulum of penal policy in America has swung backward from the 19th to the 18th."

Another speaker at the meeting was A. Warren Stearns, Massachusetts Commissioner of Correction.

"ALIEN LAW" CRUEL

"The United States, through refusing to modify restrictions regarding the entrance of families of aliens, is legally contributing to the breaking up of family life," declared Mary McDowell of Chicago, head resident of the University of Chicago settlement.

"We are not an unkindly lot of folks, but we are cruel so long as we permit in our midst families of aliens or citizens to be separated, part of them in the old country, while perhaps the chief bread winner is in the 'land of the free.' It is questionable whether we are not doing an immoral act, even if done unthinkingly."

She pointed out the tragedies in the family life of aliens lawfully entered and living in the United States, who have made heroic efforts to become citizens that they might bring over the mother and children, or the grandparents, who are too old to compete in the labor market here, but who must be supported.

"Those aliens have been hindered by petty technicalities and have had to wait years before they could achieve their perfectly moral longing to secure to themselves and to the nation a normal family life.

AGE VIEWS HIT.

"Full citizenship as the price of reunion of immigrant families is often too great a price to pay, as it reacts dangerously," she declared.

"No one wants old people in America, and many a young girl of 20 in search of a job suddenly discovers she is an old woman," declared Caroline Manning of Washington, a member of the U. S. Women's Bureau.

According to Miss Manning, "beyond the age of 25 and 30, industrial employment for women has become increasingly precarious. The ads ask for girls 16 to 24. When you go looking for work they all want kids."

These sentiments were cited by Miss Manning as some she is constantly encountering, in her surveys of women in industry.

GIVE HER A CHANCE.

"If a woman of 30 can learn to run an airplane," she said, "or if a woman of 50 can learn to drive an automobile, she certainly should be given a chance to demonstrate the fact that she can watch an automatic weighing machine or pull the lever that starts or stops a cigar wrapping machine."

Most of the speakers joined in dedicating Friday the 13th as "a day of hope for those who have reached economic old age."

Trail Laughing Driver

HIT AND RUNNER, BEWARE! Miss Lillian Cohen of Vine st., Everett, is on your trail, assisted by Patrolman James Carroll of Everett. She was struck by an auto in Revere Beach parkway and slightly hurt. Then the autoist, laughing, sped away. That laugh may yet prove his undoing. (Staff photo.)

GIRL AFTER HIT AND RUN CAR

"He laughs best that laughs last."

So runs the French, Italian, German and Danish proverb

And Miss Lillian Cohen, 22, of Vine st., Everett, today declared she will have the last laugh on the hit and run driver who last night struck her as she was crossing the Revere Beach parkway at Everett ave.

The driver "gave her the laugh," she declared, as he speeded on in the direction of Boston, but she obtained enough of a description of him and his car to enable her to identify him

Early today, with Patrolman James Carroll of Everett, she stood on guard at the scene of the accident, scrutinizing every driver and car that passed. She intends to keep up the vigil, she says, until she has rounded up the laughing motorist

At intervals, in an automobile she made a tour of the parkway

She was painfully but not seriously injured

Sir Ricard Saltonstall, Lady Arbella Johnson, for whom the ship was named, Rev. George Phillips and all the others who came in the party bearing the seal of Massachusetts Bay Colony charter were all represented

It was Salem's day and visitors from all parts of the country testified to their appreciation of the ceremonies.

They enjoyed every part of the pageant, from the time of the appearance of the reproduction of the Arbella to the arrival of the party on the specially constructed village of Naumkeag and the start of the cavalcade for Boston

What Do You Know About That?

HUNTING DOWN THE WILY RODENT TO GUARD CITY'S HEALTH

Edward J. Kennedy, of the city health division, is a modern Pied Piper of Boston. He is constantly waging war against the plague-infested rodent for the protection of the public health.

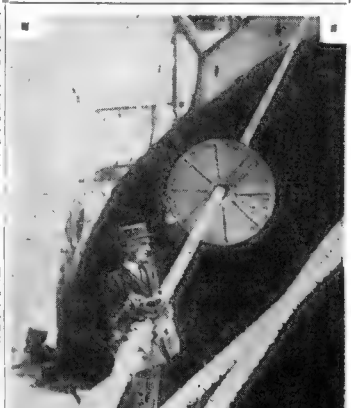
Not the usual type of "rat catcher" is Kennedy, but an expert rodent exterminator, who has studied his foe for the past 18 years. He uses his own methods of extermination and matches his wits against those of the rats in each of his big ventures of extermination.

"The harboring of rats is an expensive proposition," Kennedy declared. "From my observation of the vast damage they can do to property I would estimate that each rat in the community is costing at least $2 a day to some one for his unwelcomed keep."

NOT VICIOUS

Rats are not the vicious type of animal that they are often believed to be, Kennedy further advised. "Like all forms of animal life, of course, when not handled properly, rats are a dangerous foe," he asserted.

"Should you get caught in a room with a rat it is best to sit quiet for a few minutes until the fellow gets used to your presence. The first excitement occasioned by your confronting the rat will have vanished then for both you and the rat. Then you can go about your work or killing the rodent without any great fear. But like all other animals rats are bad actors when cornered; and why shouldn't they be, they are fighting for life?"



RAT EXTERMINATOR PLYING TRADE WITH SCIENTIFIC EQUIPMENT

RATS TALK

"I have made such a close study of rats that I am firmly convinced that they have their own language. This may sound silly to some but to me it is a fact. You would wonder too that I can justly class rats as belonging to the smart type and the dizzy, know-nothing type."

In his time Kennedy says he has handled nearly 500,000 rats in one way or another for laboratory tests and the like.

There is not a nook or cranny in the city that is not known to Kennedy. He can also tell the particular type of rat that is in any given district of the city. Whether they are smart, dizzy, high vitality or low vitality rats and much more about their pedigree can be told by him in a glance at the rodent

The waterfront, he said, is not the rat infested part of the city that it used to be. By forcing wharf owners to cement the bases of their property and mixing them the rats are not nearly so numerous there now.

Sharkey Claims Blow Was Fair Left Hook

'Bugs' Baer on Big Fight

—By "BUGS" BAER—

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 13—Jack Sharkey blew a fight last night after he had his monogram engraved on the world championship. He had it in the bag and was on the way home with it when he stopped on his own chin.

We noticed that the Crying Sailor was erratic when he stepped into the ring. His judgment of distance was so bad that he had a bunion plaster on his shinbone.

Schmeling went south from a few punch that was only seen by Judge Barnes. Neither the other judges nor Referee Crowley caught the flue that dropped Max to the terrace like a watermelon falling off a farmer's wagon.

It was Sharkey's fight all the way. He went over Max like Niagara Falls over Russia. Schmeling didn't land an effective punch in the entire four rounds. All that Sharkey had to do was to keep his punches up and he would have counted in like a bank president enters a safety deposit vault.

We feel sorry for Sharkey. His punches about as level around either fight his man in a barrel or over a back fence.

The only way Sharkey will ever win the championship is for the other guy to wear hoop skirts.

The evening was not a complete loss for the hysterical sailor. He grabbed himself a mess of golden cabbage. And also had a good cry.

If Jack Sharkey cannot overcome his bad habit of losing his head and smacking low he should hang up his gloves. And he should hang them up on top of the Woolworth Building so that the only thing they can smack low are Zeppelins.

Even at that it was a good fight until Sharkey started bowling.

It was daylight when the first fight started, but it didn't stay light long for Frettl Brand of Holland when Ralph Picuello kissed him between the ears. Pietti was going down for the third time when the referee pulled him into the boat.

As Joe Humphrey started his magnavox baccalaureate address we noticed that three of Joe's teeth were missing. Now we know why Joe's voice carries so far. There's nothing to stop it.

It was an all heavyweight card, with boys displaying all the dexterity and footwork of city dressed beef on the hook.

During a thrilling lull in the scuffle between Bianchi and Poreda, there was an outburst of cheering. Grover Whalen marched in four abreast.

It seems that Commissioner Mulrooney had suspended Grover's traffic rules in order to allow the ex-commissioner to reach the fight.

Among the distinguished journalists who strolled in just after dark were Ray Long, Arthur Brisbane, Jack Wheeler, William R. Hearst Jr., Roy Howard, Emil Reinhauser, Damon Runyon, Grantland Rice and Joe the newsboy.

Matteo Oss and Henry Lamar were fighting in front of 70000 people but couldn't seem to work up for such a small crowd. Oss is from Madrid and fought in the Spanish manner must be popular by breeders and omelets.

It was the most successful Milk Fund Benefit of all years. Every kid in New York City will have enough milk to swim across.

His honor, the Jimmale, who is monarch of all the city, has stepped in with a small but select party of 600 policemen.

The bout between Oss and Lamar was stopped at the end of the eighth round in order to allow a man to catch a freight train.

There was a tremendous outburst of static when Schmeling climbed into the ring. He was dressed in a stale old bathrobe that Joe Jacobs copped in a Turkish bath.

Jack Sharkey favored the German to a happy fanfare of sheets and hoots. He had an American flag wrapped around his shoulders. Over 70 photographers leaped into the ring and Referee Crowley was still chasing them out after the gong rang for the fight.

Lamar Victor in Preliminary Bout

New York, June 13—In the preliminary bouts to the Sharkey-Schmeling battle Ralph Picuello of Long Island knocked out Piet Brand of Holland in the third round in the opening contest.

In the second bout, Stanley Poreda of Jersey City, a protege of Joe Jeannette, won the decision over Raul Bianchi of the Argentine in six hearts.

Henry Lamar of Boston won from Matteo Oss of Spain in an eight-round bout. The contest was billed for ten frames, but was cut short so as to get the main event into the ring when rain threatened.

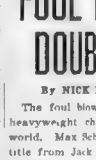
FLATLEY SAYS FOUL BLOW DOUBTFUL

By NICK FLATLEY

The foul blow is still the heavyweight champion of the world. Max Schmeling won the title from Jack Sharkey at the Stadium, but the title he now owns is all surrounded by ifs, ands and buts.

Sharkey had been giving Max a terrific shellacking for three rounds. He hit him with everything, had him groggy and rolling on his heels.



Nick Flatley

Jack, fighting the smartest and best fight of his checkered career, was standing back measuring the German for the kill. He let fly a wicked left for the Schmeling body. He had hit the invader just once before in that body, and Max had doubled up and bent pedalled.

Sharkey had found the weak spot after softening up the foe with a great assortment of left hooks and right crosses. He was out in front by inches, and triumph was but a matter of little time.

Then he swished his left, and Schmeling went down, paining faces and holding his midriff, a la Phil Scott. The officials who were running the fight, were all up in the air.

Referee Crowley, who was back of Sharkey, went running around asking the judges' advice. Charlie Matheson, who was over across the ring was inclined to say he didn't see it. So was the referee, but Judge Harold Barnes, who was on the sector where Max was squirming around, declared the blow was low.

Outcome Tough Break for Sharkey

After a recount the referee opinioned the same way, but it was apparent that he didn't just know what to do when the collapse happened.

As your correspondent saw the blow, it landed right on the Schmeling belt line, a punch that would have been called legal ninety nine times out of a hundred.

It was a tremendous sock with all the Sharkey power back of it and it would have battered Max if it landed on his celluloid solar plexus. It was the toughest break the tough breaks the game has suffered in the ring and one sound sympathy with his fears as the wicked denouement took out of the ring all his dreams shattered by what he believed a weird decision.

This one will be debated just as long as the Scott mixup at Miami but one thing always will remain clear in every mind—that Sharkey was pasting the German unmercifully, and that a knockout was merely a matter of a few more judiciously placed wallops.

The unfortunate incident hit the crowd in peculiar fashion. For a moment there was stunned silence as the referee scurried around the ring, and Schmeling a gaudily clad seconds came in and hauled him back to his corner.

Then there was some booing, and a stout cheer for Sharkey after Joe Humphries had announced the foul and the passage of the crown to Germany.

Schmeling Sorry to Win by Foul

The fight was supposed to restore the prestige of the boxing game but after the startling foul there was no such thing as prestige left.

Sharkey's handlers admit that the blow was right on the belt line, claiming that Schmeling jumped up to meet it as he saw it coming.

Max gets vent to the opinion that he didn't want to win the title that way. It is his opinion that he will only have it for such time as he agrees to mix up with Sharkey again.

The new champion was quiescent from start to finish. He rose to lab with his left hand not his natural style, and as a result was eating boxing gloves from the opening bell.

He managed to land a supposed punch now and then, but his blows never bothered Sharkey, who kept dancing around, dropping right and lefts just about where he chose.

Sharkey looked like the great heavyweight he should be all through the rumpus. He was cool and calm, and picked his shots before every blow he let go.

The new champion proved he can take it, for almost any other heavy in the land would have gone down

FIRST GERMAN CHAMP

MAX SCHMELING, Berlin, Germany, became the first German heavyweight champion of the world when he was awarded the bout with Jack Sharkey on a foul in the fourth round of their title battle at the Yankee Stadium last night.

Max on Way to K. O. When Fatal Blow Was Struck

By JAMES J. CORBETT

Former Heavyweight Champion of the World

Copyright, 1930, by International News Service, Inc.

New York, June 13—So long as the ring game endures, fandom will not forget the battle of last night, wherein Max Schmeling gained a world's title under confusing conditions without parallel in ring history.

The German was outpunched at practically all during the first [illegible] fighting. He seemed destined to be a second out. Sharkey, fighting carefully, was gradually battering down his foe, when [illegible] with the knee [illegible] Schmeling [illegible] on the [illegible] thuds.

Schmeling was tottering in the third from a fusillade of Sharkey blows. He was lacking in full fighting energy when he came out for the fourth. Sharkey walked into him constantly, popping lefts, crashing rights, tying the German in the clinches and battering his body.

And then came the amazing climax.

Referee Did Not See Fatal Punch

Matheson had not seen the punch. Meanwhile Referee Crowley decided the foul [illegible] Schmeling was entitled to the decision, the ring [illegible] with the seconds of the fighters.

Crowley puzzled by the situation, began racing around the ring with both managers banging on to him. He finally turned to Judge Harold Barnes.

"Did you see the blow?"

"Yes, it was foul," answered Barnes.

Crowley still half rattled, could not make up his mind.

The bell rang for the fifth. Sharkey went to mid-ring then to Schmeling's corner. He stood there [illegible] Schmeling was groaning. Then screamed Schmeling from Sharkey and all the while the two managers were trying to get Crowley to make a decision.

Punch May Always Remain in Dispute

He finally made it:

"Schmeling wins on foul."

But he admitted that he had not seen the blow.

The punch which flattened Schmeling may always remain in dispute. Some who claim to have seen it say it was a left hook to the groin, others said it was a right. And a few claim it wasn't a punch, that it was Sharkey's knee.

Whatever the cause, the fact is indisputable that it was not deliberate. All his other punches had been clean. Sharkey was winning easily. It was a great question as to whether Schmeling would last up to the tenth.

And then, on the verge of the championship that he sought and which he had pursued certain to win, sensational stroke, again at Sharkey, the foul blow was thrown by Schmeling takes the championship to a foreign land.

Manager of Max Schmeling

New York, June 13 (CS)—Max Schmeling is heavyweight champion of the world today, but it is a matter of keen regret to all of us that he had to be fouled to win. Whether it was intentional or not it is another blot on Sharkey's record.

Schmeling is a clean fighter and a good sportsman. He proved that he could take hard punches and recover quickly.

Sharkey had his hardest fights on Max's head in the third round and he shook them off in rounds back as fresh as ever in the fourth round. That's when condition and such came to his rescue.

Sharkey can boast all he wants to but in my opinion he became discouraged after his right exploded harmlessly on Max's jaw. He hadn't counted on encountering such tough opposition and he was belted a few times himself which didn't help his morale.

I said all along that Schmeling would outpunch him and he was beginning to do it. We didn't expect to win quickly and we did expect to see Schmeling punished at the start. He was just too game for Sharkey, that's all.

I think he would have won off by himself if the fight had gone the limit. As it was I believe he would have softened Sharkey up by the eighth round and knocked him out by the 10th.

There wasn't any question about the illegality of the last punch.

HUB BOXER THINKS HE SCORED K. O.

By JACK SHARKEY

American Heavyweight Champion

New York, June 13—It was a left hook to the stomach which caused Max Schmeling of Germany to drop to the canvas in the fourth round of our bout at the Yankee Stadium. It was as clean a knockout punch as was ever scored.

At the time the final punch went over, Schmeling was a beaten man. I had found it easy to hit him on the chin and in the body with left and right hand punches.

Later I started pumping right hand blows to the German's chin. When Max began to slow down, I drove some heavy left hand socks to the body. I soon found that Schmeling did not stand up as well under body blows as when hit on the chin.

Runyon Calls Deciding Blow Accidental Foul

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, June 13—Max Schmeling, the German, called "the Black Uhlan of the Rhine," won the heavyweight championship of the world from Jack Sharkey of Boston, in the great New York free milk fund spectacle at the Yankee Stadium in the fourth round on a foul.

It was a wild swinging left hook delivered by Sharkey within five seconds of the bell, and landed so far down on Schmeling's purple trunks that it was clearly visible to most of the crowd of 75,000 assembled in the stadium.

However, it was undoubtedly accidental. Sharkey was easily outboxing the German, and had won every round, though the flat-nosed, dark-browed German kept shuffling in awkwardly, but relentlessly at the ex-sailor.

Damon Runyon

He took many a solid smack on the chin in the four rounds, and his return fire hadn't scarcely ruffled the thinning hair of the burly man from Boston.

James Crowley was the referee. He is one of the New York athletic commissioners, a veteran, a slight built, nimble man. Sharkey's back was turned to Crowley as the punch was delivered, but Crowley said he saw the blow and in his opinion it was a foul. Anyway, it happened directly in front of Harold Barnes, one of the judges, and

New York, June 13—The first of the so-called "ringside seats" at the Sharkey-Schmeling bout were exactly 14 rows from the ring. Four rows were devoted to the "working press" and 10 other rows were given over to "patrons." The "ringside seats" extended far into the outfield.

Sharkey Eager for Return Bout With Schmeling

THE ABOVE PHOTO shows the fateful fourth round foul scene. Schmeling, after being struck a blow that to some was a severe foul, to others a fair blow, fell in apparent agony. Jim Crowley, the referee, who did not see the blow, was momentarily puzzled about the affair. Sharkey, believing he had K. O.'d Schmeling, is walking toward a neutral corner.

Sharkey Ready to Battle Max Schmeling Again

him to sell his interest in Schmelings contract. Max is in a position to do some dictating to Purlow as the latter would not receive anything if the German does not battle before October 1.

A Sharkey-Schmeling bout early in October is also under consideration.

SHARKEY HOME.

Schmeling was still in New York today, while Sharkey returned over the road by auto to Boston at 2 o'clock this morning.

Disappointed at the ending of the bout after he had decisively licked Schmeling for four frames, the American champion sat with Mrs Sharkey in their hotel suite. He wanted to get away from the whole business. He was eager to get into an atmosphere where nobody talked boxing.

"If we start home now," said Jack, addressing Mrs. Sharkey, "we shall be home in time to see the kids get up."

"Then let's get started at once," replied Mrs. Sharkey.

And so the bitter man in the Milk Fund show, accompanied by Mrs Sharkey, turned his back on his great disappointment and thought of what a kick he would get out of seeing his three children once more. Perhaps at that moment the heavyweight championship of the world didn't seem so important. He reached his home at eight.

Judge Harold Barnes gave the verdict to Schmeling on a foul after Referee Jimmy Crowley declared he did not see any low blow.

Up to the time the bout ended, Sharkey had a big point advantage. He was too good a boxer for Schmeling. At long range the American title holder outjabbed Max

Crowley Admits He Didn't See Blow

The fourth session found Sharkey shifting his attack between the head and body. Once more he had the margin on the youthful German.

Suddenly Sharkey shifted and let a left hook fly for the stomach. When the sock landed, Schmeling dropped to the canvas. He set up a claim of foul.

Crowley stated he didn't see any low blow, and consulted with Judges Charles Mathieson and Harold Barnes. The latter was the judge on the side of the ring where the final blow was delivered.

At the time the punch was landed, Sharkey's back was toward Barnes and so he was in a poor position to see what actually happened Barnes, however, ruled the blow was foul and his decision was accepted by the referee who then said he also had seen a low blow.

in the second round before the barrage of hooks and uppercuts that came from the Sharkey batter.

Schmeling Nearly Flattened in Second

Max is a bulldog, and patiently intended to try to wear down the opposition. But as things looked, Sharkey was fit to go along for a million rounds, and wasn't even breath ng heavily when the disastrous finale dropped bleakly into life.

Schmeling was nearly tipped over in the second round, his face was crimson and swollen, and he was slowing up perceptibly, when he collected his surprising title. Schmeling proved that he was tough, but that was about all. Jaunted punching power was not apparent, and his left hand was useless.

Sharkey had not the slightest trouble brushing Max away with a deft left jab, and then cracking him on the whiskers with his left Max was hit but twice in the body and showed that he doesn't like it there. But he can and did take punishment around the head and chin

The thing that sticks out of the whole affair is the fact that something must be done about this questionable fouling, or the fight game will go entirely to pot.

When a world's heavy title changes hands, on one of those things, it is time that some system should be devised to correct an evil that strangely enough has appeared only in the last few years

$100,000 for Max to Meet Stribling

Griffin, Ga., June 13 (AP)—E. A. Scales, chairman of the Griffin Boxing Commission, today telegraphed Max Schmeling that he would pay him $100,000 and a split in the gate receipts to meet W. L. (Young) Stribling here Labor Day.

Scales said he would build a stadium to seat 75,000 and put $50,000 on deposit as a guarantee of good faith if Schmeling would sign

All Bets Off in Case of Win on Foul

It is understood among the gambling gentry, although not written down in black and white, that all bets are automatically called off in the event of a foul, as was the case in the Sharkey-Schmeling world's heavyweight championship fight in New York last night.

All sorts of confusion, ranging from first fights to arguments of a minor nature, have been prevalent throughout the country today as a result of the weird ending to last night's fiasco. Those who bet on Schmeling claimed the money wagered and the Sharkey backers took the opposite stance.

But it is understood among ramblers that all bets are off in the case of a foul.

Fair or Foul Controversy Now Occupies Fight Fans

Was the blow that gave the heavyweight crown to a foreigner for the first time in modern ring history fair or foul?

Gene Tunney, former champion
"It was a foul."

Jim Corbett, former world's heavyweight champion
"I did not see the alleged foul blow from the position I occupied around the ring, but if such a blow was landed it certainly wasn't deliberate."

B. J. Mahoney, sporting editor Boston Daily Record
"Sharkey was robbed. I only judge in a position to see to blow didn't see it."

Nick Flatley, sports editor Boston Evening American

Alan Gould, Associated Press sports editor

Ned Fleischer, The Ring

Jimmy Powers, New York Daily News
"It may have been a foul, but the Lord knows whether Schmeling jumped into it or not."

Jack Conway, Boston Evening American
"At the time the punch landed Sharkey's back was toward Judge Barnes and so he was in a poor position to see what actually happened."

Bill Cunningham, Boston Post

Doc Amy, Boston Post

Dave Eagan, Boston Globe

Mark Kelly, Los Angeles Examiner.
"From where I sat it looked as if Schmeling jumped into it."

Jimmy DeForest, trainer:
"It looked to me from where I sat as an absolutely fair punch. It was a terrific left smash that was going upward."

Dan Parker, sports editor, New York Mirror

Murray Lewin, New York Mirror
"There was no foul."

Westbrook Pegler, Chicago Tribune

Vincent Treanor, New York Evening World

Rice Whitman, Boston Herald
"The blow was a foul."

W. A. Hamilton, Boston Herald
"Too bad, but the punch was low."

By HYPE IGOE—N. Y. American.

New York, June 13—Max Schmeling is the new heavyweight champion of the world, but he is not the world's best fighter by a long shot.

He probably can't whip one side of Jack Sharkey, who, when fairly romping home with the title, accidentally struck a low blow and was disqualified in the fourth round at the Yankee Stadium last night. The great Milk Fund show ended in a bewildering uproar.

By Bill Corum — New York Journal.

A hopelessly outclassed boxer won the heavyweight championship of the world last night on a left hook that was very obviously low. It was a stiff punch, but not particularly vicious.

Damon Runyon, New York American—Accidental foul

Ed Frayne, New York American—Judge Harold Barnes called it as he saw it. It was a low blow.

Joe Williams, Telegram.

Harry Grayson.

Joe Burchard

Schmeling is a powerful fighter but is still lacking in experience. He is wide open to left and right hand hand punches. He knows little about infighting and did not do any damage when at close quarters.

In the first round I was content to feint Schmeling into position and peppered him straight left jabs and made him miss when he tried to reach me with his right hand punches.

Phil Scott Seeks Schmeling Bout

Sanderstead, England, June 13 (INS)—Phil Scott, British heavyweight boxing champion, today called Jack Sharkey "a specialist in the art of scientific fouling" and announced that he would immediately challenge Schmeling for a championship bout.

"The result of last night's fight didn't surprise me," Scott told the International News. "I had already predicted it would be a fiasco.

"Even though Sharkey was leading comfortably he couldn't avoid exploiting his peculiar specialty—a knockout blow to the side, which he had practiced to perfection.

"A man who has proved clearly that he's not prepared to play fairly, he is a menace to decent sport."

Joan Fry Engaged to British Officer

London, June 3 (AP)—A few hours before she was due to play in a Wightman cup contest at Wimbledon against Mrs. Helen Wills Moody the engagement of Miss Joan Fry, young British tennis woman, to Lieut Thomas Anley Lakeman of the British army was announced.

Plans for New Bout to Settle Title Up Today

date at least for the Muldoon-Tunney trophy, emblematic of championship recognition, so far as its honors are concerned. But today, cold analysis of the unsatisfactory and disappointing climax to a two-year search for a fit monarch of heavyweight ranks appeared to offer no sound basis for proclaiming the young German possessor of honors universal in scope, where neither of the principals in the main test, beforehand, held any clear or undisputed claim to championship position.

Jack-browed, likable, courageous Max, experts may hold, should not be penalized and deprived of recognition for several beyond his control, but the fact remained that Schmeling was carried bodily and in apparently great pain from the ring last night, the winner, but a badly-battered one.

The upshot of all the fight furor may be to match Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling for a return bout, probably over the heads in settlement of the heavyweight chaos. William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, told Sharkey's manager after the bout that he would be ready today to discuss promotion of another contest here.

Meanwhile, Sharkey faced punishment under the stringent foul rules of the State Athletic Commission, despite an understanding had this commission that for the fight last night specified these regulations were not to apply. The commission sometime ago decided automatically to suspend a fighter for 60 days for his first foul offence in fouling an opponent, and also to pay him on a pro-rata round basis.

SCHMELING HURT

Sharkey and Schmeling, splitting 50-per cent of a net gate of $711,-688 each, would collect around $177,-917, or nearly $12,000 per round each. Should the commission attempt to enforce its rules, Sharkey would get only $47,000 for the four rounds that the contest lasted. Schmeling would not be penalized.

Schmeling was hurt by a punch that was unquestionably low after having been decisively outboxed by a outmatched Jack Sharkey, who with one erratic blow of his fist swept away the high honors that seemed almost certain to be his. The German crumpled to the floor, to be carried to his corner and declared the victor only a few minutes after it seemed he was on the verge of being clearly knocked out, when the American battered him over the ring with a viciously sustained two-fisted onslaught.

In the third round, Sharkey had Schmeling groggy and a quick victory apparently in his grasp. A round later, the fans were treated to such startling rapidity that scenes of the wildest disorder and confusion developed.

The fatal and final blow, intended as a left hook for the stomach, but somehow unintentionally misdirected, was delivered as the fighters were close together along the ropes, with the lap of the gong, sending the round, only a few seconds away.

The referee, Jimmy Crowley, on the opposite side of the ring, with Sharkey's back between him and Schmeling, failed to see the punch. Withholding his decision as the German sank in agony to the floor, Crowley hesitated and was almost instantly surrounded and harassed by the managers, seconds and newspapermen of two fighters as he sought advice from officials on either side of the ring. With the clamor still at its height, and the crowd in a complete uproar, Crowley finally accepted the unqualified judgment of one of the judges, Harold Barnes, and pronounced Schmeling the victor on a foul.

JUDGE CALLED VERDICT

Barnes was the only one of the three officials to have an unobstructed view of the final blow and he unhesitatingly called it grounds for disqualification of the American.

The finish was a shock to the big crowd, estimated at more than 70,000 spectators, who had contributed an estimated "gate" of $740,-000, the largest in three years, in the hope of seeing the long-existing heavyweight muddle cleared up by a decisive victory for either Sharkey or Schmeling. Fans and experts had established Sharkey the favorite and after the third round, expected to see him produce one of his most impressive triumphs instead they saw the big and temperamental Bostonian "blow" his best chance for championship recognition, much as by his erratic work he had tossed away two previous chances to climb the heights.

It was in the same spot that Sharkey failed in his first test, a knockout victim of Jack Dempsey in a bout in 1927 that provoked a spirited "foul or fair" debate afterward.

Last winter, in Miami, Sharkey was awarded a questionable knockout victory over the Englishman, Phil Scott, whose claims of foul were disallowed. The beneficiary of that decision then, Sharkey last night was the victim of his own and oft-pronounced lack of control.

SHARKEY CONFIDENT

Sharkey entered the ring at the stadium supremely confident, an American flag draped around his shoulders and a disdainful sneer on his face that not even the raucous boos, mingled with the cheers for him seemed to affect. Except throughout most of the first three rounds sustained this outward confidence of the American "hope,"

Scull Collision Injures Oarsman

Philadelphia, June 13 (AP)—Injured in a collision of racing double sculls during a practice row, Edward Mendenhall, star oarsman of the Pennsylvania Barge Club, was in a serious condition today.

Splinters more than a foot long, from the shattered bow of the scull which collided with his boat, pierced Mendenhall's back. A blood transfusion was made in an effort to save his life.

UNFORTUNATE, SAYS DEMPSEY

Los Angeles, June 13 (AP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, expressing his opinion of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight in New York last night, said:

"It was unfortunate for Schmeling, the victor, and Sharkey, the loser, that it ended in a foul."

Dempsey declared the outcome would make no difference in his present plans which he said are to go into training after recuperating from a recent operation.

"After going into training, I will decide whether I will fight again," Dempsey added.

"My congratulations to Schmeling."

Mrs. Moody Wins; Helen Jacobs Loses in Court Cup Play

MISS PALFREY AND PARTNER DEFEATED

Wimbledon, England, June 13 (AP)—England's strong team of feminine tennis players turned back the Americans in two out of three matches today as the United States team, headed by Helen Wills Moody, began defense of the famous Wightman Cup.

Mrs. Moody won her singles match, but Helen Jacobs lost and the American doubles pair likewise met defeat.

The English took a lead of two matches to one when, after an even break in singles, the experienced doubles combination of Freda Mitchell Harvey and Joan Fry came from behind and beat 11-year-old Sarah Palfrey and Edith Cross, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4.

England thus captured the honors of the day and will carry a lead into the second day's matches which will conclude the series tomorrow.

Mrs. Moody had no trouble defeating Joan Fry in the opening singles match 6—1, 6—1, but her fellow-Californian, Helen Jacobs was worn down and out-maneuvered by that tall English tactician Mrs. Phoebe Watson.

Mrs. Watson overcame an early lead to win at 2—6, 8—2, 6—4, the same scores by which our compatriots later won in doubles.

Sarah Palfrey and Edith Cross Lose

Going into the deciding set with the English and American teams on exactly even terms thus far, Miss Palfrey and Miss Cross dropped the first game and then won three straight, only to lose the next three, giving Britain a 4—3 lead.

A lucky netcord followed by a smashing point winner by Miss Cross enabled the Americans to win the eighth game, but the British again went ahead 5—4, winning the ninth game with a loss of but one point.

The Americans deuced the 10th but lost it and with it went the set and match, 6—4.

CHAMP IN AGONY AS BOUT ENDED

$155,000 FOR MILK FUND

New York, June 13 (INS)—Official figures on the financial return from the Sharkey-Schmeling fight showed a gross of $749,934, with a net, after the state tax has been deducted, of $711,668.

By contract Schmeling and Sharkey each get 25 per cent of the net gate or $177,917 each.

The preliminary fighters and other expenses also represent a deduction.

From the fight itself the Milk Fund derived approximately $130,000. To this, in percentages from radio broadcasting, motion picture program and other concessions there is an increment estimated at $25,000.

The Milk Fund Benefit therefore gives the babies $155,000, with the possibility that this figure may be increased in the final reckoning by perhaps $5000.

More Thrills Outside the Ropes, Says Tunney

By BRYAN BELL.

New York, June 13 (AP)—The night before the bout between Jack Sharkey and Phil Scott in Miami last February Gene Tunney sat in a seashore bungalow and talked of courage in the ring.

He named three or four "game" fighters, including the late Harry Greb, Bartley Madden, who died a few days later, and "Chuck" Wiggins.

Ex-Champ Thinks Blow Was Foul

Last night Tunney sat in a ringside seat and saw Max Schmeling win on a foul from Jack Sharkey in a contest intended to nominate his successor on the throne he abdicated.

He was sought as an expert for an opinion. It was promptly forthcoming.

"It was a foul," the former champion said without hesitation. "It was unintentional beyond question, and unfortunate, but it was a foul."

"The blow ending tonight's bout is a punch which comes under a right hand and must be timed perfectly or it will land low with damaging effect. It is one blow that will cause excruciating pain and incapacitate a boxer. If it is started too low it is very dangerous.

Gene Has No Comment on Ring Situation

"Few boxers can use that punch. It is too difficult to control. I saw it start and was not greatly surprised to see Schmeling double up in agony. I would have been surprised if anything else had happened.

"The blow started entirely too low. It's too bad, of course, for clearly Sharkey did not intend to hit low."

Tunney pleasantly but firmly declined to discuss the championship situation, regarded as chaotic after the bewildering outcome of the titular bout.

Asked point blank if Schmeling's name would be engraved on the Tunney-Muldoon trophy, emblematic of the world's heavyweight championship, the former champion smiled, but would not commit himself.

"You are the champion," he said to Tunney.

"Oh, no, I'm not."

"Did you get a thrill out of the bout, such as it was, and as far as it went?" he was asked.

"Many thrills," he said. "There are more thrills to be had outside the ring than in."

SCHMELING'S 'MA' WEEPS AT NEWS

Berlin, June 13 (US)—Max Schmeling's mother broke into sobs this morning when she was told over the telephone that her son was the new heavyweight champion of the world.

For a few minutes she could not speak. Then, weeping, she said:

"I knew he would win. I was always sure of my beloved boy."

"My most heartfelt congratulations on your triumph. I send you a great big kiss. Many greetings from Peter, Erneh and your brother, Rudi."

Universal Service was the first to give Ma Schmeling the authentic news of Max's victory. An elaborate broadcasting system, hooking up all Germany went for nothing, since the German stations were unable to pick up the fight and had to rely on the scattering half-confirmed press reports.

"It is true then? It is true that my son has won?" Ma asked excitedly. "I hope my boy is not hurt, but I am so happy he won.

"Please forgive me for a moment—it is hard to hold back the tears. I had dreamed this, and though I was sure Maxie would be the world's champion, it makes me cry."

Jumbo Nine Plays Cruiser Team Today

Tufts and the U S S Southery will cross bats at the Tufts Oval this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the two teams meet as a feature of the class day exercises.

Chet Story will probably get the assignment against the navy team and Lou Adams will be saved to go against Harvard at the Oval on Saturday in the Jumbos' last game of the season. Tufts with seven wins against six losses, is out to increase its win record.

Only Adams and Parkhurst, pitchers; Fitzgerald, first baseman, and Rizzo, a substitute infielder, will be lost to the team this year and Coach Nash will have an almost veteran outfit to put on the field next season.

PROCTOR SEES BUILDING ON UPGRADE

Sales Increase, Too; Nutter Tells Poland Springs Meeting of Better Business Plan

Poland Spring, Me., June 13 (INS)—A bud of increasing prosperity is already beginning to bloom on the rosebush of New England industry, said President Redfield Proctor of the New England Council in opening the 19th quarterly meeting of the Council today.

"The value of building contracts awarded in New England in April was 3.3 per cent above April of 1929," President Proctor declared. "Sales of New England department stores for the first four months of 1930 were two per cent above the same period in 1928 and one per cent above the 1929 figure.

"New England industry as a whole accepted President Hoover's request that curtailment of production, where necessary, be accomplished by part-time employment for the greatest number. In this way it has helped to maintain employment and buying power."

A merchandizing program to be placed before New England manufacturers as a codification of actual steps being taken to increase sales, decrease selling costs and improve profits, was announced by William F. Nutter, Maine member of the council's industrial committee.

Planaf or an intenses tudy of airport development needs for New England were suggested by Chester A. Jordan of Portland, member of the council's committee on aeronautical development.

The study would gather facts on the logical lanes of air travel, the landing facilities necessary to maintain safe scheduled travel over them, the adjustments necessary for regular air travel during the summer and winter and teh advantages and disadvantages of the several thousand lakes in New England and other bodies of water suitable landing places

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojos, half-Spanish and half-American, has come from the desert town of Hermosa, Ariz., to New York, where she has planned to marry Jack Farrell, a young engineer. Her exotic beauty attracts the attention of Alphonse Courbet, who engages her as a model to go to Paris. The engagement arouses the fury of Madame Pauline, who is fiercely jealous of newcomers to Alphonse's shop.

CHAPTER 15

In the private salon of Alphonse behind the main showroom of the shop, Raquel sat for a long time, her mind focused on the rules, which, according to the great dictator of fashion, would make her into a first-class model.

"One must relax so," he said, allowing his body to fall into a pose of elegant ease.

"The chin up, now at a tilt, so. As though one listened to catch the strain of a haunting melody. The shoulders straight, forward, ah, ever so little. A sway of the hips, bonjour, so." Raquel caught her lip under her white teeth. She must not laugh at Alphonse as he swayed across the thick, cream-colored rug. She imitated him. So perfectly he himself gave way to a smile of delighted approbation.

Objects to Feet
Finally Blames Shoes

"She is quick, like the little monkey," he said to the tawny saleswoman who assisted at these strange rites. "Now a wrap, the ermine one, white with the fringe of black. Down from the shoulder —so. The hands, to enfold it lovingly so that the silhouette—that is right. So! With verve! Now the feet—"

Up came the long, pointed white fingers of Alphonse in a flutter of dismay.

"The feet, mademoiselle!" he exclaimed. "They are quite impossible. On that stool, please, that I may examine more closely. Ah-h-h!" A sigh of relief escaped him. "It is not the feet, after all. It is the boots. Such boots I have never seen. Pleasant boots. At once we must see to them. A note for the boots, Miss Emily. I will select the shades, a dozen, for the beginning."

And so on through the long morning. Raquel swaying. Raquel sheathing the slim litheness of her in sleek satin, in powdery velvet, in silken cobwebs and the sheen of costly furs.

Alphonse did not again mention the woman with the ample breast and absurdly narrow hips. Nor did he refer to the unpleasant scene that had been so effectively stopped by his entrance to the shop.

Curious glances of other saleswomen followed them as they left the shop. The air was tense. As if it had been electrically charged.

"Who is Madame Pauline?"

No sooner were they clear of Chez Alphonse than Raquel asked the question. In the tone of one not to be silenced by evasion.

Miss Emily laughed, mirthlessly.

"Pauline is—well, I suppose you'd call her the boss of the works, or something," she said. "She used to be a saleswoman, like I am, a few years ago. She's off her head about Alphonse. Absolutely dotty about him. She did threaten to put a knife in the girl. Poor little devil blew out of the shop and never did come back. Take my advice, Rojos, and lay off Alphonse. Pauline's got something on him."

"That's her business." The ripe curve of Raquel's red lips tightened. "If she wants to make a fool of herself, let her. But she'd better never lay hands on me again."

The Beauty Box

—BY HELEN FOLLETT—

Women who live in hotels, who are not muscularly active, should join a gym class. There is danger of developing the hotel shape.

Active muscles keep fat cells from taking squatters' rights and when fat cells are settled they are not easy to chase away. So much bridge and not enough golf, tennis or swimming means that the meal bag figure is a possibility. Nothing suggests youth so much as active step and slenderness of silhouette.

The short girl, who is still growing, should get a lot of stretching. She should imitate the noble house dog who never arises from sleep without rousing his muscles with a good stretch. Animals follow nature's health laws. They seldom over eat. They rest when they are tired. They keep their muscles flexible and in order. Humans make laws of their own which aren't so good.

Before having her hair dyed, the suppliciant for renewed youth should consider the upkeep. The hair grows six inches a year. Every month half an inch of grey hair will appear at the scalp. There must be a touch-up every six weeks, if the deception is not to be advertised to a curious and interested world. If possible have a specialist do the work. It is cheaper in the long run.

Miss Emily, seeing the set of those red lips, the pallor of that perfect face, thought that if the new model so willed it the terrifying regime of Madame Pauline in the shop of Alphonse was, indeed, ended.

Raquel's first afternoon in the shop was a duplicate of the morning. As she walked toward her hotel in the early evening, she asked herself again and again:

"Can there really be so many beautiful clothes in the world?"

Yes. And more to come. She, Raquel, had worn them, would go on wearing them.

The hat with the white paradise, at $150, was but the beginning. A dozen pairs of shoes. The black satin dress with the white scarf-that made her look like a dark Madonna. It was to be hers. Her own dress!

Turning into the dim hall that led to her room—the lights were not yet on—Raquel came to a sudden halt. A thin yellow line shone farther along the hall. Someone in her room had turned on the lights. Instantly she was alert. It might be the maid, yet intuitively she knew it was not. Why? A snick-thief? A robber? He'd find little enough loot in her room.

Now she was scudding along the hall, close to the wall. The light disappeared. A draft had blown the door to. Would she risk pushing it back ever so slightly? No need. The draft had done it for her. Only a small rectangle of her room was visible through the crack. A desk, with hotel paper piled neatly in cubby-holes.

Man in Room
Raquel Faces Him

As she stood there, undecided about her next move, a form moved into the line of sight. A man in dark suit and light fedora hat. Raquel could not see his face. She moved slightly, warily. Examining the paper in the desk. Shuffling the contents of the waste basket. Lifting drawers. He paused. Raquel could tell by the slackening of his body that a baffled look had come over his face. He had not found that which he sought.

Now his attention was caught by her clock, the one she had worn when she fled Hermosa. It was hung on the back of the desk chair. He lifted it, turned it over, peered at the cardboard in the back. He was looking for a label there. Someone who dared not ask wanted to know something about Raquel. Where she came from. A coat label might tell that. Who would be interested in such information?. Not Alphonse. He had shown no inclination to pry into her past. They all must be—

"If you will tell me what it is you want, perhaps I can find it for you."

"Umm. So you tried the waste-basket. Not on collar of my cloak." She laughed, leaning against the bottom of the bed.

"If you will excuse me, lady," he said, sliding toward the door, his eyes still on her face, "I guess I'll be going."

"I would." She was searching him now with her black look. "And see that you don't come back. I have already summoned the hotel attendant, by putting my finger on that button by the door and keeping it there while you were busy looking for your tray in the collar of my cloak. He will be here any moment."

The man let out a curse, leaped for the door, recoiled. Feet came hurrying along the hall. He was caught. A fox in a trap.

Opens Trap
Lets Intruder Go

"Don't give yourself away, coward!" warned Raquel. "Here, take this cloak. I will ask the servant to bring me coffee. Do yourself out as if you had come for the cloak. Quick, now—"

"You mean you are not going to—"

"Turn you over to the police? Certainly not. You must take a message for me. To Madame Pauline."

The man started. As if a missile had hit him midriff.

"Tell madame that all she will ever learn about Raquel Rojos, the new model for Paris, would be less than can be written on the back of a dime. Tell her, too, that Raquel comes from a town where babies use stilettos for playthings."

Raquel spoke loudly, so the person outside the door could hear.

"You may go now. Do not bother to return the cloak. I have finished with it."

This Day in Our History

This is the anniversary of the birth, June 13, 1786, of Winfield Scott, a general in the U. S. Army, who won fame in the War with Mexico. He died in 1866, having taken no part in the Civil War on account of age.

Some Frocks Smart Without Coats

By ANN ARDEN

(Ann Arden broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT FROCKS APPEAR AS SMART WITHOUT THEIR COATS

AS WARMER days come along you critically rummage through the closet for a frock or two that will look well without a coat. Something quite trim which will look as jaunty at luncheon in town as it does when it takes a sporting interest in things about the countryside. This frock, you muse, could very well be a heavier silk or one of those delightful summery georgettes, so with that decided you immediately face forth with a gleam in your eye and a sufficient padding for your purse.

• • •

THE NEXT time you are seen, we, hunting for chic, find you standing alongside your swift, gleaming roadster as the thrilled bystander at a polo meet or golf tournament. Of course, you are wearing the perfect frock, for you have had no trouble finding it. Not only you but your friends have decided that such a frock is indispensable to the season's activities, which include so many and such a variety of engagements.

• • •

THE FROCK pictured is of georgette in soft rose tone, embroidered in tiny bouquets and scattered posies, of yellow, blue, lavender and green. It has a suggestion of the new little cap covering the arm top, a shallow V neckline, and circular inserts at bottom of skirt

• • •

THE SUZANNE TALBOT hat has its crown and upper brim of black taffeta, its two lower and narrow brims, one of pale, the other deeper rose taffetas, all three with edges cut like rose petals

• • •

• • •

TAFFETA goes as far in its recovered popularity as to enter the millinery mode, not content with an established place in street, afternoon and evening frock and coat fashions. A large picture hat of ermine and taffeta appears, to accompany the afternoon frock. Lacy braids and novelty straws are other fabrics that are used for the new larger hat.

• • •

THE SMART woman is "naturally nice" this season. Pink-and-whiteness is something coveted, as a beautiful brown was a year ago. "Pretty effects" being the desirable ones, the choice colors and color combinations for summer are those that emphasize attractive individual colorings. Delicate pinks and blues, soft grays and golden beiges navy blues, browns and henna shades will be very much present

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashion generally. Address your questions to the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or to Station WHDH.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Slump in Heart-Balm

A Kansas princess is suing for a mere $25,000 for the alienation of her ex-husband's ex-affections. Some men would consider that more of an insult than a compliment.

Only three or four years ago a popular princess demanded $250,00 for the purloining of her husband a alleged "heart." Evidently the price of husbands is going DOWN.

We are beginning to discover that the heart on love that has to be fought for is not worth the wear and tear on a pair of boxing-gloves.

Honest, steady, unwavering love the kind that you don't have to work for or worry over or struggle to keep—is becoming one of the rarest quality. But the kind that you have to sue for isn't worth two cents. Yet a woman will break her heart out over the "lost love" of a man who never loved anybody but himself.

As a matter of fact, it is not so often "heart-balm" for which a woman sues, as it is ANTI-BALM. Even when a woman doesn't particularly want a man herself, she resents the reflection on her charms and the slur on her attractions when another woman clearly walks off with him.

YOU know how it is! You may have an old car on which the brakes refuse to work and whose engine always goes dead at a critical moment. You may leave it standing out in the rain and refuse to feed it enough oil and water. You may even plan to junk it. But just let somebody else start to try to drive off with it and you call out all the police!

Yet try to get RID of a broken-down flivver and you can't even GIVE it it away! No matter how carelessly you leave it around, nobody ever steals it!

And, that is the way it is with a husband that you really don't want and have given up as a bad proposition. No woman will take him off your hands. Which proves my old theory that the only way to get onto a husband is not to TRY. Still, to ask $25,000 for a love that is not worth twenty-five cents is plain profiteering!

New Recipes From the West

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast over WHDH, the Boston Evening American Station

As I told you Wednesday, I expected a dear friend from Milwaukee this morning, Miss Annette M. Snapper, and she arrived on schedule

Martha Lee

Miss Snapper is in charge of the educational department of a famous Milwaukee manufacturer of malt, gingelade and that good wholesome milk food which is cheese and yet really more than cheese. Miss Snapper brought some intriguing new recipes with her - I'll gladly send you a recipe folder of them if you'll drop me a line - and among them were two that I must make room for here. The first, a honey cheese sauce for waffles, is so easy to make and tastes so good.

HONEY CHEESE SAUCE

Take 5 tbsp. of more-than-cheese, add a couple of drops of hot water to soften it, cream it until it's nice and soft and then stir into it ½ of a cup of honey. Beat it until it's thoroughly mixed and then serve it over your hot waffles.

The other is this luscious luncheon salad—Tomato Shrimp Ring Mold—that's truly delicious. It calls for: One can of tomato soup 1½ tsps. of acidulated gelatin, ½ pkg. of more than-cheese, a small can of shrimps, some stuffed olives and some sweet-sour pickles and ½ lemon. Warm the tomato soup. Dissolve the gelatin in a couple of tbsps of cold water, then put the dissolved gelatin in the hot soup stir in the ½ pkg. of more-than cheese. You know you don't have to grate the more-than-cheese just put it in in lumps. When the mixture is cool, stir in the juice of half a lemon—adding it slowly so it won't curdle. Pour a little of the soup mixture in the ring mold and when it has congealed a bit the, arrange with a row of the shrimps which, of course, you have cleaned. Add a little more of the soup mixture and when it has become a little bit firmer, add a row of sliced olives and pickles. You can use your own artistic taste in placing the shrimps, pickles and olives in the mold. But, be sure to cover each arrangement with the soup mixture so that you have the tomato-colored gelatin on the outside with the filling inside.

When it's quite firm, turn out on a plate covered with lettuce leaves. It's quite easy to turn out a jelly mold if you just dip the bottom of it quickly in and out of hot water before you turn it out. It is a complete luncheon dish if you fill the center of the ring with potato chips and garnish the outside with pieces of hard boiled egg. A cold mayonnaise dressing can be served with it.

This more-than-cheese can be used as a delightful stuffing for celery, also. You mix it with equal parts of peanut butter, cream it them together thoroughly until it's quite smooth. Then add paprika and a dash of Worcestershire sauce and fill crisp celery stalks with it

Remember, a stamped, addressed envelope to Martha Lee, care of Boston Evening American, will bring the recipe folder to you pronto

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Women's Exchange

Here's a real problem sent in by Mr. W. G. E., who asks us not to publish her address, and I hope she'll receive some helpful advice, she writes:

"What shall I do? I am married, have two girls, ten and five, and a husband with whom I've been very happy until about two years ago, when my father died and my mother immediately turned to make her home with us. She has never liked my arrangement with the soup mixture so that you have the tomato-colored gelatin on the outside with the filling inside.

During the past three months he is so changed he doesn't seem the same person. He is very fond and good to my children, but when he is very fond and good to my children, but when he is very companionable.

"Sometimes the youngest girl does not see him from one Sunday until the next. My mother usurps many of the duties that belong to the mistress of the house and runs things to suit herself. Her health is good and she has quite a little money, so it is not necessary for her to live with anyone.

"I also have a married brother and a married sister, either of whom I think would volunteer to spend some of her time elsewhere? Would I be justified in asking her to leave?"

How to Keep Well -:- By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

The Common Nose-Bleed Is Not Necessarily Serious

"EPISTAXIS" is another name for nose-bleed. Nature shows her great curative powers in every child who has nose-bleed. She merely opens a safety valve to prevent congestion.

The fluid which is lost is almost instantaneously replaced by the body, which draws water from its tissues. Thus it is that persons do not suffer greatly from nose-bleed save where there is thirst. The water must be replaced in the tissues without delay.

Dr. Copeland

Some persons are particularly susceptible to nose-bleed. In some families there seems to be a hereditary tendency to recurrent attacks. It might come on at any time of day or night. They may be awakened from sleep with a bad bleeding from the nose. It is, however never a serious condition

Nasal catarrh is a very common cause of nose-bleed. Anaemic children and growing children are especially susceptible to it.

Epistaxis is sometimes mistaken for a hemorrhage from the lungs or stomach when the bleeding occurs in the sleep and some of the blood is swallowed. In such a case it is quite natural that the blood should be vomited the next morning. The experience is apt to cause some alarm, especially if the patient is nervous or easily frightened.

Usually the bleeding stops of its own accord. If it should persist there are simple methods which are nearly always successful. One is the application of cold water or ice to the nape and back of the neck. If this does not check it try snuffing up the nose a very small amount of pulverized alum or tannic acid

Rest is essential. Have the patient lie down or recline in an easy chair with the head thrown back

In rare cases it is necessary to have the nose packed in order to stop the bleeding. Your doctor should be consulted in the matter

When there is an ulcer in the nose it may be necessary to have the ulcerated spot touched with a caustic, but your doctor should do this. Whenever there is recurrent nose-bleeding a doctor should be consulted. He may save you much annoyance and suffering.

HEALTH QUERIES ANSWERS

Mr. D.. Q.—What is leucoplakia and how can it be cured?

A.—The disturbance in question is a skin disease characterized by the formation of white areas on the skin. There is no cure, but the parts can be made less noticeable by staining them with a light coating of walnut juice.

LAZY LADY. Q.—What would cause a tired, lazy feeling, accompanied by yellow, streaked eyes, pains around the shoulder blades, a feeling of dizziness and a queer sensation as if I were rocking from side to side. I have quite a few pimples and fever blisters on my lips every few weeks.

A—Probably due to a gall bladder disturbance. Correct your diet and keep your bowels active. Your complexion will improve as your condition in general is better

MRS. F. V. D. Q.—Is there a cure for varicose veins? What do you advise?

A.—If the varicose veins are slight, bandaging or wearing an elastic stocking is often helpful, but in most cases surgical procedure is necessary.

Problems of the Heart and Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It Would Seem Advisable to Be Friends With Hattie

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Here I come with my troubles I'm 16 years old and the boy I care for is 18. I met him through a girl, Hattie. I know he liked me because his friends told me so.

During the winter I went with an other girl, and in doing so, I rarely saw this boy. Should I renew my friendship with Hattie or would it look as though I were "chasing" him? Do you think I should let this boy know I like him, too?

Methuen. PEP.

Dear Pep: I believe there could be no harm in renewing your friendship with Hattie Unless you make your interest in the young man too pointed, no one could accuse you of "chasing" him

Misses the Kiss

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 15 years old, and have liked a fellow for two years. He walked home with me one night and kissed me; since then I cannot forget him. I met him at a fair one night and he asked me to dance. I did not feel well so I refused. Since then he has made a fool out of me. He speaks when he feels like it. I have met him at dances and sometimes he asks me to dance with him and other times he does not. Please tell me how I can win back his friendship as I like him very much.

F. E.

Gloucester.

Dear F. E.: I think likely it's the kiss you miss more than the young man. His interest in you is evidently merely spasmodic, and I advise you to look elsewhere for a permanent interest.

Be Your Quiet Self

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 17 years old, and a very quiet and refined girl, while my girl friend is "devilish." She gets many boy-friends, while I get none. We are both considered very pretty. Should I be like my girl friend or shall I just be my quiet self? Why do boys like to go out with the "devilish" kind rather than the quiet" kind? The boys laugh at me when I don't let them kiss me; they tell me to be like my girl friend; should I? Doesn't a "good" girl get any chances with boys nowadays?

GOOD GIRL.

Dear Good Girl: Good girls have just as much chance as they ever had. The "devilish" ones are a little more obvious today than they used to be, that's all. Just continue being yourself, quiet and sweet, and if possible take a real interest in the people you meet. You must sometimes go more than halfway to make friends but no case should you lower your standard of behavior Mr Right Man will come along before you know it

Keep Your Friends

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a steady reader of your column and thought you could give me a little advice on my own problem. I am a young girl of 16 though nearly 17 and have been keeping steady company with a young man two years my senior for about seven months; of course it is understood that I went out with him before this time but he left me and I then took him back. I am fond of him but I no longer love him as I did the first time I went out with him. Since I entered school last October I have met a young man whom I like very much. (In this letter I will not be speaking of his initial name.) Early in the month of November S. wrote me a few notes in which he was speaking a little of love. In the month of December he left class on account of sickness, now he has come back and I try to write him coming on the same subject but he chances the subject. And moreover I asked her to attend to a certain place with me to which my friend invited me telling me that she would have a boy friend to go with her, but he turns me down by telling me what do you persist on my going with you, what is the matter with P (name of the first one). I think that he is a very nice boy.

S. but I wonder if he likes me a little or not, or perhaps he hides it because of my going out with P I do not know, but please tell me how I can win his friendship Thank you in advance

Nashua, N. H. BLANCHE

Dear "Blanche". It may be that the friend you call S is merely so attached to him a sense of loyalty to the other man If I could conduct a class for girls on matters of the heart, one of my foundation rules would be "Don't ask men to go out with you." There is no harm in mentioning that you'd like to go to theater or concert or dance, but it doesn't take the hint, let it drop then, as a non-conventional girl would, and insisting on their rights when it comes to making the first move. My advice is, be friend with people who like you and forget those who don't Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer all love problems sent in by readers.

Mrs. Beeckman Advises

By MRS. BEECKMAN

The Wedding Breakfast

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

2. If all present are seated at one long table should the bride and groom sit, and who should sit next to them?

3 Should I use place cards?

BUBBLING BILLIE.

1. They may leave them any where convenient in the room. Or they may, if the center of the table is cleared, place the flowers there, as a kind of supplemental centerpiece

2 The bride and groom sit together at the head of the table, the bride on the right of the groom On the bride's right is the best man, and on the groom's left the bride's chief attendant, either a maid of honor or the matron of honor

3 This is usually convenient, especially if there are more than eight guests at the table

Sending Flowers

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

Would you kindly tell me if it is proper to send a bouquet of flowers to a boy friend who is graduating from college this coming Wednesday? Thank you for any advice you can give me. I would like to know as soon as possible. T. W.

Everett

Yes, if you know him very well

Lady With Her Coat

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

1—Is it correct to cut with a knife?

2—Who should help the lady with her coat in a restaurant, the waiter or her escort?

SHIRLEY.

1—Yes

2 The girl's escort should stand beside her chair, before he takes her meal, but when she takes off her coat. And, when they are ready to leave, he goes to her chair to help her put on her coat

3 It is customary, now, form for him to allow the latter the privilege, that is his privilege and duty.

Not never

EVENING AMERICAN MARKETS

New York Stocks — News of Street

STOCK PRICES ARE RALLIED IN WALL ST.

New York, June 13—Extensive short covering was under way much of the session in Wall Street today. It made its appearance after a fortnight of steadily declining prices, interrupted by but one noteworthy rally.

A few supporting orders appeared in pivotal shares at the opening, but heavy were able to depress the list substantially during the early trading.

The market became extremely dull on the decline, however, and shorts were inclined to accent this as a warning that the selling movement, momentarily at least, was complete.

EARLY RAG CANCELLED

By midday early losses were generally regained. Trading was then in about half the volume of the same period yesterday.

Shares, numbering about 4 points and more above yesterday's close included Eastman Kodak, Foster Wheeler, International Business Machines, Case, Penn Dixie preferred and Spang Chalfant, the last named reaching a new high for the year. Spang Chalfant, through its affiliation with Byers, has been helped by the record demand for pipe.

Shares quickly moving up to more than 6 points included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Consolidated Gas, Westinghouse Electric, American Can, Radio, Standard Gas, Byers, Air Reduction and Yellow Truck.

TELEPHONE AT LOW

During the morning selling [illegible] of 2 to 8 points were numerous, [illegible] with Allied Chemical making the maximum drop, only to rally smartly. American Telephone touched a new low for the year at 214, before rebounding.

U. S. Freight was depressed to a new low at 55, compared with the peak of 103, in selling based on light movement of freight.

General Foods is reported to [illegible] a contract in the near future with the Atlantic & Pacific chain-store system for the distribution of part of Generals frosted food output. A. & P. operates approximately 15,000 stores, and estimates have been made that the proposed contract would add from 10 per cent to 20 per cent to General Foods' sales volume, which totaled $128,000,000 last year.

Market sentiment in brokerage circles remained varied and confused, however, and commission houses were hesitant about making recommendations, fearing that the rally might prove short-lived.

There was no inclination to forecast a sustained upward movement until a decided turn appears in business. Unsettlement of commodity prices was still an unremoved fly in the ointment. A similar Copper prices were reduced an other ½ of a cent to 12¾ cents a pound, with rumors of additional moving at 12 cents, the recent low.

The leadership of U. S. Steel, which reached 166 in new high, [illegible] gave considerable [illegible] to the general recovery [illegible] and were pushed a point or more above the previous close.

American Telephone rebounded nearly 5 points and other pivotal industrials improved a couple of points. The close was firm.

UTILITIES AND OILS LEAD CURB

New York, June 13—Traders felt their way cautiously on the Curb market today. Some of the recent short lines were covered after a highly irregular opening, and the list tended higher, but the volume shrank as the afternoon progressed.

Most of the recovery was in the utilities and oils, which had been largely on the short selling. Electric Bond & Share soon rallied a couple of points. Central States Electric and Cities Service Co. issues remained heavy. American Superpower, United Light A, United Gas Improvement and Niagara Hudson made improvement.

Covering in the oils developed advances by Standard Oil of Indiana, Humble and Vacuum. Cities Service drifted.

Several of the industrials rallied briskly. A. O. Smith was up 3 points on small purchases, while Technicolor was more than 2. Deere was nominally higher.

A new low for the year was scored by Aluminum of America. Columbia Pictures, Voting Certificates, approximated the year's minimum. This company has the rights on the Schmeling-Sharkey fight. Investment Trust Shares were firm [illegible]

Transformer Corp. Listing Approved

Chicago, June 13 (INS)—Approval of the governing committee of the Chicago Stock Exchange was given to the listing of the common stock of the Transformer Corp. of America, it was learned today. Of the 150,000 shares authorized, 75,333 shares are subject to listing and 50,000 shares are subject to trading.

PRICES RALLY IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices were mixed in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today most of the session, but rallied in the last hour. American Telephone, after selling at a new low for the year, rallied almost 2 points. Economy Stores sold 3 points lower.

Merganthaler and Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway first preferred were at new low figures, rallying in later trading. Edison lost a 5-point gain. Quincy Mining was steady. Cities Service, selling ex-dividend, was fractionally lower.

Gains of a point or more were shown by General Electric, Boston Personal Property and Bigelow Sanford. Losses of about a point were shown by United Founders, Pond Creek Pocahontas, Nash, American Founders gain, Quincy Mining and Continental Corporation.

At the annual meeting of Fairbanks Company Albert G. Shea was elected a director, succeeding William Harris, resigned. Mr. Shea, head of Boston investment firm of Albert G. Shea & Co., is understood to have acquired a substantial stock interest in Fairbanks Company.

At its Cliff Mining property in Keweenaw county, Calumet & Hecla Consolidated is starting a diamond drill hole in the bottom level, one-half mile south of the shaft. It will be the first hole to the south and will be drilled deep. A hole north of the shaft and one to the north of the Phoenix shaft, each over 2200 feet in depth, were the deepest ever drilled in the Michigan copper district. The new hole, however, may be drilled deeper than these.

Primary object of the Cliff exploration is the discovery of a parent lode believed to have been the source of the copper in the rich Cliff and Phoenix fissures. Copper has been found during the progress of crosscutting and diamond drilling, but it has not been persistent.

Cotton Rallies in New York Market

New York, June 13—The cotton market steadied in the late morning when there was further covering and probably some local buying on a less favorable report of the weather outlook, which was regarded as pointing to further showers with probable rains over the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. New crop months recovered the greater part of their early losses with both old and new October selling a point above yesterday's closing quotation, while July rallied about 15 points from the lowest. The later market was about net unchanged to 7 points lower on the old crop, while July showed a net loss of 17 points.

Oil Sale Ratified

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

BUY BOND

R. R., Roslindale—I am a wage earner, with dependents, and have saved $5000 which I want to invest. Please give suggestions.

Ans.—Invest the money into high grade bonds for the sake of your dependents. Investing the sum of $5000 in Title Guarantee & Trust 5½s will bring $165 annually. They are guaranteed as to principal and interest. Keep the other $2000 in the savings bank. It may come in handy.

HAS A PROFIT

A. E., Boston—I own some Westinghouse on which I have a good profit. What are the latest earnings?

Ans.—In the first quarter of current year Westinghouse Electric earned $1.70 a share, which was somewhat less than for similar period of 1929 when $2.11 a share was shown. Full year's net for 1929 was $10.15 a share compared with $8.78 in 1928. The company is the country's second largest manufacturer of electrical equipment. Dividends of $4 a share annually were paid from 1920. With quarterly payment of $1.25 a share January 31, 1930, the annual rate was increased to $5. The stock is a good investment.

Of course, if you are more interested in a profit you can decide when to sell it.

SELECTS BONDS

M.-J., Newton—On your former advice I bought ten shares Public Service of New Jersey 6 per cent preferred and twenty Standard Gas & Electric $4 preferred and am well pleased. I have saved $6000 more and want to buy bonds. How about Allis-Chalmers 5s, American Type Founders 6s and National Dairy Products 5½s?

Ans.—You know how to select good bonds. Allis-Chalmers debenture 5s, 1937, American Type Founders debenture 6s, 1940, and National Dairy Products 5½s, 1948, are sound. Listed on the New York Stock Exchange they yield from 4.7 to 5.3 per cent. Buy $1000 of each and keep the other $2000 in the savings bank. The stocks you have secure the income.

Bond Offerings of Week Larger

New bond offerings this week, including the German loan, totaled $232,073,020 against $63,762,500 last week and $58,197,000 a year ago.

HIGHLIGHTS OF STOCK MARKET ARE GIVEN

Pres. Marcus of Bank of United States stated its business this year has been highly satisfactory and earnings for first six months will be approximately equivalent to dividend requirements for the entire year, or about $2 a share.

Copper shipments by boat out of the Michigan district in May amounted to 8,542,000 pounds. Of this total, Calumet & Hecla shipped 3,960,000 pounds; 2,692,000 moved from the Michigan smelter, which treats Copper Range, Mohawk, Isle Royale and Seneca mineral; and 210,000 was shipped by Quincy. Each shipments were fairly good in May, accounting for more than 5,000,000 pounds, but little copper business either by boat or rail has been done in the past few weeks.

* * *

Initial dividend of 20 cents by Pennroad Corp. indicates earnest effort by new management to pay a return to holders of trust certificates as soon as earnings justified. The declaration is just termed "a dividend." It will be paid to 145,000 certificate holders representing 8,000,000 shares and will total $1,818,000.

Although some investment trust heads are considering presenting to the Stock Exchange their views on the ruling prohibiting purchase of a trust's own common shares, except under exceptional circumstances, there is no indication that any revision is probable in the near future. The ruling as promulgated was made flexible so that it might cover such varied situations as might arise.

Directors of Mohawk Rubber Co. voted to increase the authorized common stocks to 150,000 no-par shares from 125,000 and to set aside 15,000 shares to be sold to employes from time to time. Special meeting of stockholders will be held June 30 to vote on the stock increase.

Sealed proposals will be received at the mayor's office until July 7 for a $15,000,000 City of Philadelphia 5½-year 4 per cent or 4¼ per cent registered and coupon loan, due July 1, 1980.

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

It is not the purpose of this particular section of the radio page to utilize it for advertising purposes or to exploit friends and acquaintances for whom we have a kindly regard. Nor would we be privileged, however, strong our impulses might be to do so, to take a verbal slam at some of the radio fraternity who are weighed down with an exaggerated ego, and which said fraternity speaking of faults might do them a world of good. We'd like to, but we can't.

But when something occurs which affects somebody in the broadcasting business, whom we have long considered a good friend, and furthermore, whom we know is a friend to thousands of the radio audience, then we're going to ask the printer to scare up a little space in which to print something about them right here in this column.

And Miss Emilie W. Sturtevent, affectionately known to a very large circle of friends as "Emmy Lou," is going to be allowed by us to leave the atmosphere of cobfish cakes, beans and Park square, for Pittsburgh, without a little cheer from us on the side-lines.

It was only a very short time after WNAC-WBZ-WLOE began their station, WBZ, on top of the Brunswick Hotel, when Miss Sturtevent became a member of the clerical force; that was back in the early part of 1924. A Boston resident, and affiliated with the station at the time, but soon dropped its interest in broadcasting.

Through the early struggles of getting the broadcasting industry established, Miss Sturtevent delved with all of her almost inexhaustible energy and mental capacity, many days for 10 and 12 hours at a stretch. Not only in her capacity as secretary to the station director, but on programs, as hostess and at a dozen other odd tasks.

Showing marked facility in the station's work, she gradually was entrusted with greater detail until finally she was given charge of program; and, we wish to remark, it was no mean task getting out an interesting program for a big station a few years ago, when the program director must depend almost wholly upon contributed talent.

With the expansion of Westinghouse broadcasting in New England to a 24 to 16-hour schedule, unsentimental microphones as avelopment of daytime broadcasts, the morning and afternoon hours offered greater oportunity for the development of women's features. In originating new presentations for the feminine listener she has made most important strides. More recently she has been engaged in the development of publicity and promotion features.

There, I'm mighty glad I've had a chance to give "Emmy Lou" a sort of decent send-off. She has been appointed to the staff of KDKA, by Lloyd C. Thomas, commercial manager of Westinghouse broadcasting, and if any of the many friends whom she has made over the air, or at the WBZA studio wish to communicate with her, the address will be: Station KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa.

We had a sort of an idea that it wouldn't be so hard to distinguish from ordinary females, those boys with the deep chest tones and Harvard accents, who have to face unsentimental microphones as announcers. Guess we were wrong, though, if the following announcements is true: "White flannel trousers, blue coats and sport shoes distinguish the announcers of B. S. C. from the other members of the staff." Captains of Paramount ushers please note.

At the Radio Dial

WIVES COMPLAIN that the golfing season keeps their husbands away from home. Here is an ideal combination; you wives can keep your husbands at home and they can still have their golf. Merely tune in on WBZA tonight at 7:15 and hear the "American Golfer" program. Tonight inaugurates the first of a series of golf news told by Grantland Rice, and golf instruction, golf etiquette, instructed by Alex Morrison, noted professional.

BARNUM AND BAILEY, look to your laurels! Tonight at 10:30 over WNAC, Earl Fuller promises to present the strong man, the fat lady, the side show, Egyptian dancing girls, and all the fixin's. Even elephants will perform, though this must be slightly complaining since television has not yet arrived. However, stretch your imaginations to the utmost and see what happens.

EXPRESSING our sentiments exactly, the Interwoven Pair, Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, will sing a number called "I'd Like to Find the Guy that Wrote the Stein Song." The occasion is tonight over WEZA at 9 o'clock. Perhaps they will seek vengeance on the composers of "Valencia," "Ramona" and a few other forgotten numbers that were beautiful the first million times they were played.

SPEAKING of overdone old favorites, the Raleigh Revue is going to present "In a Little Spanish Town," over WEEI at 10 o'clock. Since the Raleigh Revers will step, however, it probably will be bearable, in fact, good. Sir Walter himself with his ever pleasing voice will be at the procedure, and the orchestra will recall his Spanish adventures by playing Spanish music.

NBC WERE SAVING Graham MacNamee for this fight last night so Neal Enslen said, "Good evening ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience," over the Fleischmann Hour with Rudy Vallee on WEEI at 9 o'clock. The Cavaliers were guest artists and they chorused in amiable fashion. Rudy did a number of things last night. He played a group of stirring West Point cadet melodies in dedication to the class which was graduated earlier in the morning. He also played the "Bridal March," "Oh Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly," in honor of the June brides and marriage month. But Rudy did something which calls for revolt. He played two numbers which he said he wrote together with "someone else." He didn't even mention the co-author's name.

Arabesque was on WNAC last night at 9 o'clock. This play within a play presents excellent diction and sophisticated dialogue. ("Sacrifice" was the name given to a dealt with a woman's sacrifice of her lover to her sister, but the brother's intervention reunited the original pair.

THE LESS SAID about the fight the better. Be different these days and speak about anything but the fight. However, the preliminary procedure was entirely eliminated since the fight started earlier than was expected. MacNamee's announcing was superb. He transmitted his feelings to us and we were emotionally keyed up to a high pitch.

THE RCA HOUR which followed was a letdown. We arrived late, but not too late to hear the comparatively young voice of the old grand dame, Mlle. Schumann-Heink. She sang carefully and her voice was well modulated.

Senate Should Keep Faith With People by Rejecting Grundy Tariff Bill Today

Seldom, if ever before, in its long and distinguished history has the United States Senate faced a graver challenge than the approaching vote upon the Grundy tariff bill presents to every Senator.

Overwhelming evidence is before the Senate that the Grundy tariff bill is the most vicious legislation of its kind that has ever threatened this country or alarmed and angered the world.

Overwhelming evidence is before the Senate that all sorts and conditions of Americans in all parts of this country are bitterly opposed to the exactions of this tariff bill and hope for bill's defeat.

More than one thousand of our great political economists who have examined this bill are agreed that it is filled with injustices. These economists have united in a protest against the extortionate rates carried in this bill.

All these economists say what the Hearst newspapers have repeatedly said, that the Grundy tariff bill will NOT help the farmer, but WILL INCREASE THE COST OF LIVING TO EVERY CITIZEN, INCLUDING THE FARMER.

Enactment of the Grundy bill into law will add at least a thousand million dollars to the cost of living every year that it remains in effect.

It will curtail production at home and lose for us markets abroad.

It will constitute an embargo by our country against the products of foreign countries. And this will provoke foreign countries to retaliate with embargoes against American products.

It will make living so high in this country and so increase expenses here that the cost of production will be nationally increased, and the ability of Americans to compete even in foreign markets from which they are not excluded will thereby be greatly decreased.

IT VIOLATES the pledges of the Republican party for a limited revision of the tariff to relieve agriculture—

IT BASELY betrays the public welfare and basely serves special privilege, and brazenly makes the Republican party the open and avowed servant of the special interests—

IT WILL CRIPPLE business at home and hamper commerce abroad, halt the return of prosperity and further impair public confidence in the integrity of the government.

FINALLY, it will provoke a world-wide tariff war against the United States.

Of course, the President should have and probably will have the public spirit to veto the Grundy tariff bill, if it ever passes the Senate.

But in this emergency THE AMERICAN PEOPLE LOOK TO THEIR SENATORS IN CONGRESS to discharge their responsibility in this vital matter and not pass it on to the President.

IF THE UNITED STATES SENATE WOULD KEEP ITS PUTATION, AND VINDICATE THE CONFIDENCE OF E PEOPLE IN ITS INDEPENDENCE AND COURAGE AND TEGRITY, IT WILL REJECT THE GRUNDY TARIFF BILL ND SAVE THIS COUNTRY FROM THE CURSE OF ITS EXTORTIONS.

'Pact-at-Any-Price' Would Cripple American Navy

By a vote of eight to four the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs has approved the bill of Senator Hawes of Missouri providing for the withdrawal of American sovereignty over the Philippine Islands within five years and the recognition of their independence.

It is alleged that BY THE TERMS OF THE WASHINGTON NAVAL TREATY the Philippine Islands are left in such an unprotected condition "THAT THEY COULD NOT BE HELD AGAINST A STRONG ENEMY FOR ANY REASONABLE LENGTH OF TIME."

Therefore the committee recommends abandoning these wards of ours to their fate lest in some future war this country should be called upon to rescue them from a new and unnamed conqueror.

It is true that in order to obtain the acceptance by Japan of the 5-3 ratio for all classes of combatant ships the United States at the Washington conference paid Japan by agreeing not to increase the fortifications of the Philippines or of our other Pacific possessions, the Hawaiian Islands alone excepted, during the life of the treaty.

But this is not an argument for breaking faith with the Philippine people or abandoning them to their fate.

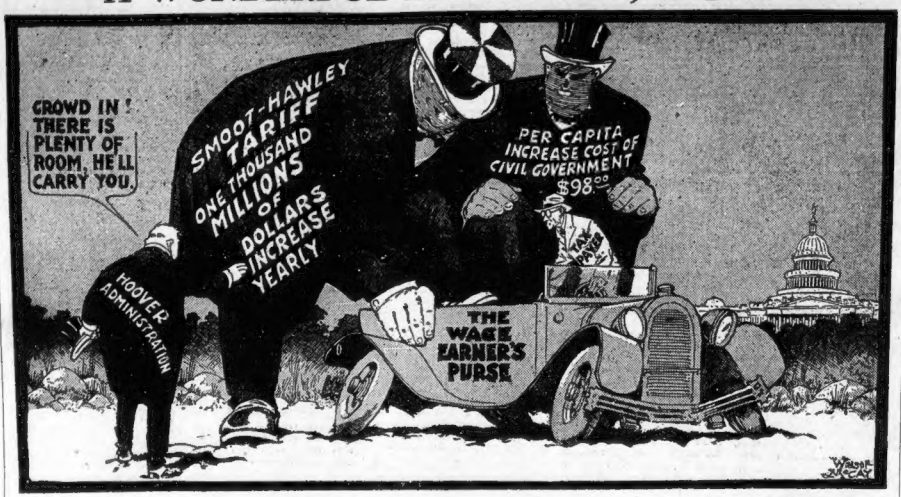
This is only a concrete example of what happens to the United States when her public servants succumb to the itch for conferences and negotiate pacts of this description by the terms of which the American people are made to "pay through the nose" for participating in conferences at which their own representatives are outwitted by the representatives of other powers.

Instead of learning our lesson at the Washington conference, instead of remembering the lesson which, under President Coolidge's leadership, we learned at the Geneva conference, the Hoover administration rushed us into the London conference and has brought home a treaty WHICH SURRENDERS THE 5-3 RATIO WITH JAPAN WHICH WE BOUGHT AT WASHINGTON AT SUCH AN EXORBITANT PRICE.

Not only would the London treaty so cripple the American Navy that it could neither defend nor rescue the Philippines in case of their capture but we would probably be unable to defend the Pacific coast. And in the light of this predicament the Senate Committee on Insular Affairs, if it is logical, will recommend giving up the Pacific coast for the same reason that it recommends giving up the Philippines.

In fact, if we are dragooned by publicity-seeking administrations into going to a few more naval conferences the United States may soon be reduced once more to the thirteen original states and not even be very secure in their defense.

A WONDERFUL LITTLE CAR, BUT—



CROWD IN! THERE IS PLENTY OF ROOM, HE'LL CARRY YOU.
SMOOT-HAWLEY TARIFF
ONE THOUSAND MILLIONS OF DOLLARS INCREASE YEARLY
PER CAPITA INCREASE COST OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT $98.00
HOOVER ADMINISTRATION
THE WAGE EARNER'S PURSE

This little car, representing the buying power of the workers and others, is asked to carry an ever-increasing load.

It is a powerful little car, representing all that money. But when you load into it a tariff that will add a thousand millions to the burden, and increased civil government costs to add about nine thousand millions, you are asking too much of the little car.

Possibly the Republicans, who are doing the loading, will find out about 1932 that even a good-natured Republican automobile can break down.

H. G. Wells Writes

For one thing, the color and size of a grafted scion's apples is modified by the rootstock. On one stock the scions show quick growth, but fruit sparingly and late; on another they fruit early and well, but stay small, and some root-stocks seem to promote both rapid growth and heavy fruiting. The degree of the stock's influence in these cases seems to depend on the place of grafting.

H. G. Wells

The more of the stock is left above-ground, the greater its influence. These and other mysteries are being investigated by such research stations as that at East Malling in Kent, and the results are already proving of great commercial value by helping applegrowers to standardize their crops.

But the most extraordinary facts concern the making of one individual organism out of two; and the manufacture of compound creatures or chimaeras.

To make two individualities coalesce into one, it is easiest to work with eggs or very early embryos. For instance, if the fertilized egg of a newt is removed from its enveloping membrane, it elongates into a dumb-bell shape at its first division.

If one such dumb-bell is lifted and placed across another the cells adhere and the united mass may turn into a single but double-sized embryo. Even if the eggs come from different species of newt, the united pair may be reorganized into a single whole, which in this case merits the title of chimaera, with its four quadrants alternately made of material from the one and the other species.

In making graft-experiments with young frog or newt embryos, it is also possible to unite bits of different species.

In this way compound tadpoles, made of the front half of one kind of frog-embryo and the hind half of another, have been put together and even reared through their transformation to become young frogs, which seemed in no way incommoded by their unnatural compositeness; and by similar methods a salamander leg, half albino and half normal, can be built up.

But the climax is reached in plants; for in them not only can such side-by-side patchworks exist, but, even among the higher groups, composite organisms can be produced, made up of a skin of one kind of plant enclosing a core belonging to another kind.

Sometimes these strange chimaeras arise spontaneously from the functional tissue where a graft has been made. The ornamental shrub Cytisus adami, often cultivated in gardens, apparently arose in this way, and consists of a skin, one cell-layer thick, of the purple broom, Cytisus purpureus, over a core of the ordinary yellow laburnum, Cytisus laburnum.

Occasionally one of the parts gets the upper hand; the core bursts through, makes a bud, and a strong-built, yellow-flowering branch of pure Laburnum results; or skin shoulders core out of its proper share in a bud, and there grows a branch of quite different character, brushy and purple-blossomed—pure, purpureus.

Such hand-in-glove unions are possible even between tissues of different genera of plants. Old stocks of hawthorn (Crataegus) grafted with medlar (Mespilus) have sometimes given rise to branches consisting of a core of hawthorn with a tissue-glove of medlar fitting over it.

Recently a way has been found for manufacturing chimaeras at command. The stem of one kind of plant (tomatoes and other species of Solanum have chiefly been used, but it has succeeded with other plants such as poplars) is cut across obliquely, and the top of the stem of another species grafted on.

Punishment for Freedom

By ARTHUR BAER

Germany meets its treasury deficit for the fiscal year, which ends at no time, by slapping an extra 10 per cent tax on bachelors.

* * *

That's great. The bachelors fight the wars. And then pay for them.

* * *

Employers seem to think that married men are more honest than single cavaliers.

* * *

As a matter of fact, every time a man is arrested for putting the switch on the firm's dough, he always says, "I did it for the wife and kiddies."

* * *

Your expert bachelor is happy at all weddings save his own. His married friends like to invite him home to dinner. Not because they like him particularly. But in family quarrels all married men like to bring along their own referees.

* * *

We don't know how the government figures out the proper ages for doing things. You must go to school when you're six, you can work when your 16, get married when you're 18, vote when you're 21, fight for the flag between the ages of 21 and 31 and retire on two flat arches when you are 60.

* * *

You can't be President until you are 45 and admirals are tossed into the waste basket at 70 just when they are starting to get smart.

* * *

If the thing is successful in Germany you know well that it is going to spread like a fat man in a hammock. And we always suspected the World Court intended to launch a branch court of domestic relations.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Are Women More Cruel Than Men?

Are women innately cruel?

A. Corbett Smith, British author and lecturer, says they are and do. Which is a rude shock to the ancient theory that woman is the tender and compassionate sex. But perhaps some of us have had reason to doubt that tradition, even before Author Smith crashed in with his impolite remarks.

Elsie Robinson

For example: A heartrending play called "The Last Mile" was staged in New York recently. It portrayed the final hours of certain convicts in a row of death cells. Every agony that the human heart can know passed through that grim, gray row. And, almost to a man, the males in the audience flinched and went still at the horror and pity of it. But not so the ladies! After the first curious surveyal of this alien scene, they began to fidget and fuss and, at length, frankly bored, to giggle. The agony of those tortured creatures was real to the men. So real they were visibly wrung by it. But, to the women, it was merely a tiresome "play without a plot." The men went gray. The women powdered their noses.

The women of the French Revolution knitted and laughed over picnic lunches, while the guillotine knife fell. To the savage squaw is left the final, most fearful torturing of the captive. But these peasants and primitives have little, if anything, on modern fine ladies, according to Mr. Smith. And in no place is this demonstrated more plainly than in the treatment of the working man by the working woman of today.

Man, as many of us have frequently suspected, was never as great shucks as he led the Missus to believe. But she didn't discover that fact as long as she stayed at home, well outside the industrial racket. Having become a worker herself, she is suffering bitter disillusionment concerning the Lords of Creation, and taking it out on them accordingly.

"She has become impatient of his apparent failure, and so she comes increasingly to despise him. Hence her desire to wound. But, with her impulsive outlook, she makes the cardinal mistake of regarding cruelty, mental or physical, as an attribute of strength instead of weakness."

And you'll be able to think of a score of examples to support this fact. But, again, is the heckling wife cruel or is she merely feeling her oats?

And the mother who tortures her family with orgies of recrimination and self-pity, fainting spells and sobbing fits, how about her? Is she cruel—or just craving the spotlight?

And last, but far from least, how about the Lady Boss? Mr. Smith says the "cruelty of women overseers to girl employes is proverbial." Ever work for a Lady Boss? Do you agree with him?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, June 13—Thoughts while strolling: Has anyone ever read the entire label on a bottle of Worcestershire sauce? Gene Tunney and Jay C. Flippen look alike. Those society girls with shops on Madison ave. Wonder if anyone ever counted the wrinkles in John D. Sr's face?

That beautiful coal black tower with gilt cornices on West 40th st., Grantland Rice's stunning daughter. If I were Mayor of New York my first act would be to abolish parades. Give some men a uniform and a plumed hat and they'll march themselves to death.

And give some smart alec a typewriter and they'll write stuff like this. Argentine gentleman who prefer bright blonds. Will Mahoney wears a derby off stage too. Wade McGrath, the hotel man. Either that cop has a dizzy spell—or else. That young lady has a stocking turned wrong.

The oriental rug seller who greets the sun with salaams every morning in Bryant Park. And returns at sundown for farewell salutes. Sidewalk toys leaping to hidden threads while salesman try to look nonchalant. Sandwich men who roam the curb edge and never look up—poor fellows.

Bob Brinkerhoff and his pipe. That two-year-old window sign: "Everything must be sold by midnight." And the place is packed daily. Arthur Hammerstein, the producer. All the Hammersteins have distinguished themselves in the theater—Oscar, Oscar II., Willie and Elaine.

Broadway chop houses that offer fried chicken and porkchops for breakfast. The only cafes left with friendly Irish waiters. Lingerie salesmen making the rounds of dressing rooms. Jobless actors—still talking big. Men with jowls shaven a sirloin red who study racing forms.

Leo Lindamann, who is Lindy, the cafe man. Barker in front of a self-photo parlor cries: "You don't know how beautiful you are!" And what, by the way, has become of Paul Swan? A youth observes: "I love craters." He probably lives on Eighty-third st. in Bensonhoist.

Broadway misses Mississippi, the grinning Ethiopian hack driver, who has clop-clopped into his eternal night. He was the last of the jovial jehus to make his stand around the Winter Garden. In his white linen duster and canary plush hat—once a costume of Al Jolson in his minstrel days—he became a Broadway character. He was befriended in lean days by many notables, including Al Smith.

Selling tea rooms is now a highly specialized racket. The racketeers open in a residential section and operate at a capacity from the start by serving delicious meals at exactly cost. When patrons are waiting in line the proprietor finds he "must go west on account of his health." The come-on seen in the window is rushing business and is anxious to buy. But when he does, trade falls away. It requires about two months to build up this sort of a sale.

The other afternoon Chico and Noodles were sunning themselves on a bench in Central Park. They had managed to struggle through the winter and spring on an income of less than $200. "I only hope Noodles goes first," said Chico.
